

To all concerned:

As a CT home owner for 23 years and a resident that has made a personal investment in solar panels (owned, not rented) I find the seeming lack of interest in renewable energy and rate hikes alarming, but I am not surprised. Any time a company of this size has a monopoly geographically, that just spells trouble for the consumer. I remember the grid blackouts of Enron days and the manipulation of systems in place, and therefore have a hard time trusting any company with highly over-paid upper management. In short, anything you can do to relieve the common consumer from this burden will be greatly appreciated.

Thank you,
Mark Saunders
