PREFACE.

This book may be considered as a continuation and development of a "Genealogical Memoir of the Huntington Family", published in 1863, by the Rev. E. B. Huntington. It has not been thought necessary to specify in the text the numerous passages copied from that work with little or no change.

The preparation of the present volume began with the election of Samuel Gladding Huntington as Historian in 1907. He collected much material for this book, but was, unfortunately, unable to continue and complete it. The secretary of the Huntington Family Association, Richard Thomas Huntington, has given much time and labor to it, and Samuel Huntington of Plainfield, N. J. has also assisted in preparing the work for the press.

The attempt has been made to trace and record all the descendants of Simon Huntington, whatever surnames they may bear. In some cases, however, data which might properly have been included in this book were omitted because they are contained in other genealogies to which reference is made.

Complete success in such an undertaking is impossible, approximate accuracy and completeness being the best that can be hoped for. It will not therefore be surprising if this book fall into the hands of persons who discern errors and defects in it. If this should be the case it is earnestly requested that the correct information be sent to the Secretary of the Huntington Family Association.

The numbers used in this book to designate individuals and show their ancestry, are thus explained. The figure 1. which begins every series, refers to Simon, the common ancestor. The next following numbers denote the sons of Simon in the order of their birth respectively; 1. 1. for William, 1. 2. for Christopher, 1. 3. for Simon, and 1. 4. for Thomas.

In like manner the subsequent numbers show in each case that the person designated was a first, second, third, or later child. Thus 1. 1. 1. 7. is the combination for William, the seventh child of John 1. 1. 1. who was the oldest child of William 1. 1. the oldest child of Simon 1. Similarly 1. 2. 4. 12. means the twelfth child of the fourth child of Christopher, the second child of the original Simon, viz: Jeremiah whose oldest child, again, has the numbers 1. 2. 4. 12. 1. and so on.

The character *, prefixed to names in the lists of children, is used to indicate the parent of a child or children mentioned later in this book.

Meetings of the Huntington Family.

FIRST MEETING.

The first meeting of the Family was held in Norwich Town on September 3, 1857. An account of the meeting, and of the preliminary action which brought it about, is contained in "A Genealogical Memoir of the Huntington Family," published by the Rev. Elijah B. Huntington in 1863.

SECOND MEETING.

In accordance with a vote passed at the first meeting, the second was held fifty years later, September 3, 1907, in the First Congregational Church, Norwich Town, Conn. The program of the meeting was as follows:

1. Organ Voluntary, ... Miss Mary Avery.
2. Reading from the Scriptures, . . Rev. Henry S. Huntington.
3. Prayer, ... Rev. Henry S. Huntington.
4. Address of Welcome, Rev. George H. Ewing, Pastor of the Church.
5. Soprano Solo, "The Lavender Girl," . . . Miss Louise Pratt.
6. Reply to Welcome, ... Rev. John T. Huntington.
7. The Huntington Hymn, written by Mrs. John W. James, daughter of Ralph Huntington of Boston, and sung at the first Family Meeting.
8. Reading of Psalm CXLVII.
9. "English Ancestry of Margaret Baret," a paper by Mr. George S. Porter.
10. Address, ... Rev. George W. Huntington.
11. Address, "Our Early Ancestors," . Samuel H. Huntington, M.D.
12. "The Historic Homes of Norwich Town," a paper by Frederick Putnam Gulliver.
13. Soprano Solo, "Absence," . . . . . Miss Louise Pratt.
14. Address, "The Significance of Our Gathering," Rev. Fr. James O. S. Huntington.
15. Open Discussion, and Formation of the Huntington Family Association, the Committee of Arrangements for the meeting being authorized to appoint a Board of Control, or Executive Committee, having power to fill vacancies in its number, and thus to be self-perpetuating. It was also voted to hold the next Family Reunion ten years later, but this was later changed to five years by a vote taken by mail.

THIRD MEETING.

The third Family Reunion was held on Sept. 6th and 7th, 1912, in the First Congregational Church, Norwich Town. There was a preliminary luncheon at the General Jabez Huntington House which was kindly placed at the disposal of the Committee as a headquarters for the meeting of 1912, by the owner Thomas Huntington, who resides in London, Eng., and the afternoon session was held at 3 P. M. with the following program, the Rev. John T. Huntington, the President, presiding.

1. Reading of the Scriptures, ... Rev. George H. Ewing.
2. Prayer, ... Rev. George Wilson Huntington.
3. Address of Welcome, ... Hon. Frederick Jabez Huntington.
4. Address, "The Preciousness of a Lasting Friendship," Rev. John T. Huntington.
5. Music.
6. Address, "The Uses of Old Families in the Republic," Hon. Huntington Wilson.
7. Music.
8. Address, "The Present Status of the Huntington Family," Mr. Samuel Gladding Huntington, the Historian of the Family.
9. Business Session for Appointment of Committees.

In the evening of the same day a banquet was held at the Wauregan House. Prof. John Bates Clark presided and made the opening address. Speeches, some of them quite informal, were also delivered by Rev. James O. S. Huntington, Henry Strong Gulliver, Secretary R. Thomas Huntington, Robert W. Huntington, Jr., and Prof. Ellsworth Huntington, and in conclusion one verse of Old Hundred was sung.

On Saturday Sept. 7th, a business meeting was held at 9 A. M., Prof. Ellsworth Huntington presiding. Reports of committees were received, a constitution was adopted, and the following officers were elected.

President, Rev. Fr. James O. S. Huntington.
First Vice President, Prof. John Bates Clark.
Second Vice President, Prof. Ellsworth Huntington.
Third Vice President, Hon. Huntington Wilson.
Historian, Mr. Samuel Gladding Huntington.
Secretary, Mr. R. Thomas Huntington.

The business session having been concluded, the following program was carried out. Prof. John Bates Clark presiding.

1. Prayer, ... Rev. David Crosby Huntington.
2. Historical Address, "Five Huntington Congressmen," Rev. Henry Strong Huntington.
3. Music, ... Prof. Herbert Yerrington, Organist.
4. Address, "The Fine Virtue of Clannishness," Prof. George Huntington.
5. Singing the Huntington Hymn.

The Association then adjourned to meet in 1917.

Following the adjournment there was another very pleasant luncheon at the Gen. Jabez house. Many of the family also went on an excursion to New London by steamer, leaving at 2 P. M.

With much regret, it has been decided not to include in this volume any of the able and interesting addresses delivered at the Family Reunions above mentioned. This conclusion has been reached in order to keep down the size and cost of the book. The genealogy is necessarily more voluminous than that contained in the Memoir of 1863.

The following is the Constitution of the Huntington Family Association.

ARTICLE I.

NAME.

The name of this organization shall be the Huntington Family Association.

ARTICLE II.

OBJECT.

The object of the Association shall be to promote fellowship among the descendants of the Huntington settlers in America; to help one another in living up to the best that has come down from our ancestors; and to collect and preserve the records and traditions of the Huntington family.

ARTICLE III.

MEMBERSHIP.

Membership in the Association shall be open to any descendant of Simon Huntington and Margaret Baret, to any other person bearing the name of Huntington who shall be approved by a unanimous vote of the Executive Committee, and to the husband and wife of any of the persons above mentioned.

ARTICLE IV.

DUES.

SECTION 1. Each member of the Association shall pay to the Secretary-Treasurer an initiation fee of one dollar, and a membership fee of one dollar at the beginning of every second year beginning with the year of initiation.

SEC. 2. Membership in the Association shall lapse unless the payment is made within six months of the time when notice that the fee is due is sent out by the Secretary, but may be restored by vote of the Executive Committee on the payment of back dues.

SEC. 3. The payment of ten dollars at one time shall constitute the payer a life member, not subject to the payment of future dues. The income only of life membership fees shall be used for current expenses of the Association.

ARTICLE V.

REUNIONS.

Reunions shall be held once in five years, at a time and place to be designated by the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE VI.

OFFICERS.

SECTION 1. The officers of the Association shall be a President, a first, a second and a third Vice President, Secretary Treasurer, and an Historian, whose duties shall be those which ordinarily appertain to these offices.

SEC. 2. Election of officers shall be by ballot, and the candidate receiving the higher number of votes for each office shall be declared elected.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of a nominating convention of three members appointed by the Executive Committee, to furnish to the Secretary a written list of one or more candidates for each office. Nomination of candidates for office may also be made by any member of the Association, provided such nominations be submitted in writing to the Secretary before the time of election. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to present to the Association a list of all the candidates nominated for office, whereupon officers shall be elected in the manner prescribed by Section 2 of this Article.

SEC. 4. In case any office becomes vacant by death or otherwise, the Executive Committee shall have power to fill it.

ARTICLE VII.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The affairs of the Association shall be entrusted to an Executive Committee, consisting of the officers already named. This committee shall meet at the call of the President or Secretary. It shall have full power in all respects during the interval between reunions, except that it shall not incur indebtedness in excess of the receipts from fees or other sources, nor shall it pledge the Association to any new policies without the vote of the Association.

ARTICLE VIII.

This Constitution may be amended by a majority vote of the members present at any Reunion.

SIMON HUNTINGTON, the Puritan Immigrant.

Our knowledge of his ancestry is derived from a report of investigations made by Gustav Anjou, a genealogist, for Henry Edwards Huntington. (1. 3. 6. 7. 6. 2. 2. 4.)

One Thomas Huntington, of whom nothing else is known with absolute certainty, had three children born in England (perhaps in Hempstead) Richard, Thomas and Elizabeth. Richard, the oldest child, born about 1460, married in 1498 Alice, daughter of Simon Loring, of Little Sampford, and had five sons, Robert, Christopher, born Dec. 18, 1500, John, Simon, (who died young,) and Richard. Christopher, the second of the sons of Richard, married, April 7, 1537, Elizabeth, daughter of George Bailey, (or Bayley,) of London, and had issue George, born Jan. 9, 1538, and seven other sons and one daughter. George married, Aug. 5, 1580, Anne, daughter of Robert Fenwick, and had issue (1,) Margaret, born May 11, 1581; married Jan. 27, 1607, Joannes Spencer; (2,) Samuel, born Feb. 16, 1582, an officer in the army of King Charles the First; (3,) Simon, born Aug. 7, 1583, our ancestor; (4,) George, born June 2, 1585, and married, Jan. 15, 1609, Marie Whitewood; (5,) Andrew, born Jan. 18, 1587, and married, June 1, 1609, Elizabeth, daughter of William Rockwell; (6.) Robert, born March 6, 1589. Thus the descent of our common ancestor is traced back through four generations.

Simon Huntington was probably married once before his marriage with Margaret Baret, June 21, 1627. though of this it is impossible to speak with certainty. Margaret Baret was the daughter of Christopher Baret, who was Mayor of Norwich, England, in 1634 and 1648, and died in August, 1649.

The church records of Roxbury, Mass., contain the earliest record of the Huntington name known in New England. It is in the handwriting of Rev. John Eliot, the pastor of that ancient church. It is a "record of such as adjoined themselves unto the fellowship of this church of Christ of Roxborough, as also of such children as were born unto them under the holy covenant of this church, who are most properly the seed of the church." This is the record of Margaret Huntington.

MARGARET HUNTINGTON, WIDOW, CAME IN 1633. HER HUSBAND DIED BY THE WAY OF THE SMALL POX. SHE BROUGHT ——— CHILDREN WITH HER.

This is practically all that is certainly known of the progenitor of the Huntington Family in America. The rest is tradition, inference and conjecture.

Margaret Huntington, the widow, married Thomas Stoughton in 1635 or 1636, and moved with him to Windsor, Conn. He was prominent in the early history of that settlement, and died there March 25, 1661.

1. 1.

William Huntington.

With respect to the parentage of William the evidence is meagre. However the letter of Peter Baret to Christopher Huntington, dated April 20, 1650, is of some importance. This letter was published in the "Genealogical Memoir of the Huntington Family" of 1863. In it the writer, a brother of Margaret (Baret, Huntington) Stoughton, directs the division of the sum of about £140 between her children, Christopher, Simon, Thomas and Ann, and the investment of Thomas' share until he should "come to be capable to employ it." William is utterly ignored, which plainly suggests that he was not nearly related in blood to the Barets. Rev. E. B. Huntington drew this inference, and said that the letter "suggests that William is more probably a brother than a son of Simon." With all due respect it must be said that in this he went too far, as William might well have been a son of Simon by a first wife, who died before his marriage to Margaret Baret. According to our information, Simon was about forty-four years old when he married Margaret. Marriages entered into at that age were more often second than first marriages. Thus of 37 first marriages of men of the second, third and fourth generations of the Huntington Family, being all those in which we know the ages of the husbands, only nine of those husbands were over thirty, only one over thirty-five, and all were under forty. Their average age was slightly under twenty-six. The average age of the husbands in the seven second marriages of those generations was about forty-one. The report of Gustav Anjou the genealogist to Henry Edwards Huntington, (1. 3. 6. 7. 6. 2. 2. 4.) beforementioned, gives the names of four brothers of Simon Huntington, but no William among them.

Thus there seems to be more reason for supposing William to have been a son of Simon than a brother. If, at the time of the immigration, he was a boy from ten to eighteen years of age, he would naturally have come with the rest of the family. But before very long his rising feeling of independence might impel him to strike out for himself. So, apparently, he did not go to Connecticut with Margaret and her children, but is found in Salisbury, Mass., as early as 1640.

His descendants have been heretofore classed as descendants of Simon, and there is no reason for a change in this respect, although we may greatly doubt if Margaret Baret was their ancestress.

At a general meeting of the freemen of Salisbury, on the 26th of 10th month in 1642, it was ordered that thirty families should remove to the west side of the Powow river, the dividing line between Salisbury and Amesbury. William's was probably one of the families who then crossed the river and became one of the pioneers in the new settlement of Amesbury, then called "Salisbury New Towne." He, however, retained possession of his share in the old Salisbury, as he was recorded as "townsman and commoner," there, on the third of twelfth month, 1650. He also paid the tax for the support of the Rev. Wm. Worcester, who was pastor over the first church in Salisbury, down to his death, in 1662. He married Joanna Bayley, a daughter of John Bayley who came from Chippendale, Eng., in the ship "Angel Gabriel" and was wrecked in the terrible storm off the coast of Pemaquid, Aug. 15, 1635. He was a great grandson of George Bayley (or Bailey,) the great grandfather of Simon Huntington. He went from Salisbury to Newbury, in 1650, and died there in 1651. This relationship is fully shown by the recorded names, and the will of John Bayley, sen; in which he provides that his son John shall pay certain legacies. In compliance with this provision, in 1652, John Bayley, jr., of Newbury, made a deed, in which he gave to the above Joanna and her two children, a lot of land on the Merrimac. Tradition makes William Huntington a religious man, and that he was a man of enterprise, and of a thoroughly English spirit is evinced by his occupancy of that exposed outpost of the English settlements of that day—opposition to French encroachments being the mainspring to the settlement of that frontier town. The residence of Wm. Huntington, in 1685–6, is given in the "Hoyt Family," as next to Thomas Hoyt. This was in Pleasant Valley, on the banks of the Merrimac, where the river is a half mile wide, and altogether a beautiful place. A part of this family possession had not in 1843 been alienated, being then in the possession of Mrs. Davis, (1. 1. 1. 7. 1. 1. 3. 8.).

The following minutes were copied from the Salisbury Town Records, and help to indicate the character and position of William Huntington.

1654, 1st month. He is enrolled as one of the present inhabitants and commoners of the New Town.

1658, Oct. 29. He is recorded as drawing land by lot, and he was one of the thirteen to whose children 500 acres of land were given. His son John is mentioned as the child to inherit his share.

1660, 10th month. "A towns shiep is grantied to Willi Howntinton for his son."

1661. He was one of the twenty-five to whom lots were laid out at the Lion's mouth.

1662, April 1. He drew 120 acres of land; and in March, 1662–3, thirty acres, "West of pond near Children's Land."

New Town, 11th month 18th day, 1663. He drew lots, "between Hamptonshire and Powow river," and in 1667, 12th month 18th day, he drew lots in four places.

In 1664 Wm. Huntington bought of John Hoyt, sen., a lot of land adjoining his own on Merrimac river.

He died about the year 1689.

The deed of Joshua Goldsmith and Mary, his wife, dated March 24th, 1689 or 1690, indicates that William Huntington was dead at that date. See record of Mary 1. 1. 3.

CHILDREN.

* 1. JOHN, born on Sabbath, the last week in Aug. 1643.
2. JAMES, died on the fifth day of the twelfth month, 1646. He was probably the second son, and died in infancy.
3. MARY, born May 8, 1648, in Amesbury, and married on the 14th day of the 6th month, 1667, Joshua Goldsmith. They probably had no children.

A bond from Jeremiah Davis, son of Mary, (1. 1. 1. 2.) dated Dec. 3, 1720, and acknowledged May 22, 1723, formerly in possession of Enoch Huntington, of Amesbury, says: "Am holden and firmly bound unto my honored grandfather, John Huntington, and my Aunt Mary Gouldsmith, widow;" the bond pledging her maintenance during her natural life.

Joshua Goldsmith and his wife Mary, sold "for and in consideration of valuable satisfaction in hand, already received in land and other good pay, of John Huntington, and for other good and lawful motives us thereunto inducing, do sell, &c., unto the abovesaid John Huntington, one-third part of the housing and lands, being the contents of, specified in a deed or gift, under the hand and seal of Jno. Bailey, of Newbury, in the County of Essex, formerly given and granted by the said Bayley unto our mother, Johannah Huntington, and to John and Mary, her two children, bearing date the 4th of the eleventh month, 1652; as also all right, &c., to all lands, goods, &c., belonging to our father, William Huntington, now deceased; this dated 24 day March one thousand six hundred eighty-nine or ninety, re-affirmed or acknowledged and yielded up the right of dower, March 1, 1692–93."

1. 1. 1.

JOHN HUNTINGTON, born in Amesbury, on the Sabbath the last week in Aug. 1643; married Dec. 25, 1665, Elizabeth Hunt; married, second, about 1686, Elizabeth Blaisdel. He died about 1729.

He had a seat assigned him in the first Congregational meeting house built in Amesbury, and the records show that he was on terms of good will and intimacy with the first Pastor of that church. He was at one time constable of the town, and appears to have been a man of character and influence.

She was born September 27, 1842. He was a farmer and a member of the Friends Society. He died May 10, 1907, in Amesbury, Mass.

He took such an interest in his own immediate progenitors, as to have his copy of the Huntington Memoirs rebound and inter-leaved with blank pages, so that he could enter the items of interest pertaining to all descendants of Benjamin (1. 1. 1. 7. 1. 1. 2.) and Moses (1. 1. 1. 7. 1. 1. 3.) which he had collected, and had about 30 pages of information entered therein, when he died.

It was owing to his efforts and enthusiasm that the Mass., and N. H. Huntingtons had their reunion in his home grounds, in Amesbury, Mass., September 25, 1884, when many gathered and spent a very profitable and enjoyable time. Mrs. Huntington died July 29, 1914, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sargent, in Amesbury, Mass.

The second and third wives were daughters of Ephraim and Sally (Laughton) Mayo, of Hallowell, Me.

He married for a fourth wife, in 1876, Myra Gray of Hallowell, Me. He spent his youth in Litchfield and East Pittston, Me.

His daughter Mrs. Emma Caroline Nason, says of him in her recent book "Old Hallowell on the Kennebec."

"Mr. Huntington moved to Hallowell about 1840, and was one of the five of that town to vote for James Birney, abolitionist candidate for president of the United States. He was at that time a comparatively new resident in Hallowell, but he soon identified himself with the political and commercial interests in the town, and was recognized as an able business man, and a large-hearted, generous, public spirited citizen."

For more than twenty-five years he was one of the prominent merchants and manufacturers of Hallowell, and an active supporter of all reforms. In the early sixties after having finished a contract for making clothing for the U. S. Army he removed his business to Augusta, Me. He retained his residence in Hallowell, though, until his death, which occurred November 20, 1876.

CHRISTOPHER HUNTINGTON, probably accompanied his mother to Windsor, Conn., where he must have spent his youth. He here married, October 7, 1652, Ruth, daughter of Wm. Rockwell, "a prominent and highly respected member of the community." He removed, probably, in the spring of 1654, to Saybrook, as the birth of one child appeared in 1653, on the Windsor records, and the death of another in May, 1654, on those of Saybrook. Here he remained until the spring of 1660, when, with a company of the Saybrook colony who had organized themselves into a church, under the care of Rev. James Fitch, he removed to the valley of the Yantic, and with his brother Simon, aided in laying the foundations of the new town of Norwich. He had now reached the prime of his manhood; and proved himself one of the most efficient and useful of the hardy pioneers. His name occurs often in the earlier records of this enterprising town, and always in honorable relations. His house lot was one of the prominent localities in the settlement. In 1668 the general court granted him 100 acres of land, not more than twenty acres of it to be meadow. In 1678, appointed town clerk. In 1685, he was one of the twelve patentees of the new town of Norwich. In 1686 his name occurs as one of the committee "to make provision for maintaining the reverend minister."

His death had occurred in 1691, as appears from the probate of his will. No stone marks the resting place of this pioneer of the Norwich settlement. He sleeps, doubtless, not far from the banks of the pleasant Yantic, in the meadow where rest, unmarked, the mortal remains of so many of the pioneers of the early settlement of Norwich.

CHILDREN.

The death of the first Christopher, and the births of all but the first two of this family, are on the Norwich records.

1. CHRISTOPHER, born in 1653; lived one year and four months, and died in Saybrook. The first fact appears on the Windsor records, and the second was taken from the Saybrook records, before they were burnt in the old fort.
2. RUTH, born April 13, 1653, and probably a twin with the above Christopher. She probably died in infancy.
3. RUTH, born in Saybrook, in April, 1658; married, March 26, 1681, Samuel Pratt of Saybrook, who came to Norwich with the early settlers. They had one child recorded in Norwich, Samuel Pratt, born February 11, 1683; she died February 14, 1683.

8. LYDIA, or as the records have chosen to enter the name, Lydyah, was born in Norwich, in August, 1672.
9. ANN, born in Norwich, October 25, 1675; married October 28, 1697, Jonathan, son of Thomas and Mary (Rudd) Bingham. Her husband was born April 15, 1674, and was the third of eleven children. His father was afterwards deacon of the Windham church. He had a family and descendants respectable both in their numbers and for their characters.

1. 2. 4.

CHRISTOPHER HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, November 1, 1660, being "the first born of males in the town." Born, thus, during the first year of the history of his native town, and destined to grow up in its infancy, and spend his manly vigor and mature age in its forming period, he was also designed and used by Providence, as a prominent contributor to the prosperity of its most vital secular interests, and a marked pillar of support to those of religion. His character, molded, mainly, by the very best of all influences, those of a quiet home, in which every-day piety hallows every-day toil, and over which a sense of duty rules as the deepest incentive to its labors and its pastimes alike, unfolded early with every element of consistency and strength. In a period of exposure and calling often for extreme adventure, he became resolute and fearless. In an age devoted to the revival of a simple and primitive piety, he became a humble, inflexible Christian; and with the best and amplest means at his disposal, trained himself to the most intelligent and effective discharge of every duty, either to God or the world.

He married, for his first wife, May 26, 1681, Sarah, born January, 1663, daughter of Deacon Thomas Adgate, by his second wife, Mrs. Mary Bushnell, widow of Richard Bushnell, of Saybrook. She was the mother of his first eight children, and died in Norwich, in February, 1705–6, aged 42. He married for his second wife, in October, 1706, Mrs. Judith (Stevens) Brewster, widow of Jonathan Brewster, a great grandson of the venerable Elder Brewster, the spiritual guide and teacher of the Mayflower pilgrims. She became the mother of four children.

In 1684 the town grant him a parcel of land on a small plain near the mouth of Crane brook.

In each of the years 1691, 1705 and 1709, he is on the record as the first townsman. He succeeded Richard Bushnell, as town clerk, which office he transmitted, in due time, to his son Isaac.

In 1695 or '96 he was appointed deacon, and in this office served with marked ability to the close of his life. He appears to have been a practical surveyor; and his decision on a dispute regarding land titles, was in those early days an end of all strife. He was, accordingly, on the commission with his uncle Simon, to re-deed the lands whose titles were in dispute.

He had become an extensive land holder, as the early records abundantly show. In 1705, July 21, he and his brother Thomas deed to John Elderkin, "all that our one hundred acres of upland and meadows, which we hold in partnership, as it was given to us by our honored father, Christopher Huntington, as by his last will and testament." Conn. Colonial Records show that Christopher was deputy to the General Court, May and August 1710, and that he was appointed Justice of the Peace, in May 1714, and October 1715.

He died in Norwich, April 24, 1735, and his remains were interred, as his venerable headstone shows, on the brow of the hill in the southeast corner of the uptown burying lot in Norwich.

RUTH (HUNTINGTON) WHEELOCK, born in Norwich, November 28, 1682; where she married, January 8, 1707–8, Ralph Wheelock, of Windham, Conn., a son of Capt. Eleazer Wheelock, of Mendon, Mass, who born in 1683.

She deserves especial notice in this memoir, both for her own great personal worth, and for the excellence and eminence of her descendants. Every tradition respecting her makes her a woman of unusual intelligence, and of rare piety. Her home, the main theater of her life, was blessed equally by her timely instructions, her holy example, and the administration of a gentle yet firm discipline. She died in Windham, September 1, 1725. Her husband married for his second wife Mercy Standish, by whom he had but one child, Mary, born November 28, 1728.

Ralph Wheelock, the husband of Ruth, was chosen deacon of Windham church in 1729. He died in Windham, October 15, 1748.

Lebanon, in 1735, where he labored in the ministry, and in the work of teaching, until 1770. While here he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of Edinburgh. During these years he had been especially successful in teaching Indian youth; and the growth of the white population in that vicinity, led him to seek a more retired post, and Hanover, N.H., was chosen as the best place for establishing an Academy for the thorough training of such English and Indian youth as might be committed to his care. Thither he repaired, and here he had the satisfaction of laying the foundations of what has since become Dartmouth College, of which he was the first President. He married for his first wife, Mrs. Sarah Maltby, a daughter of Rev. John Davenport, of Stamford, Conn., and for his second, Miss Mary Brismade, of Milford, Conn. Ruth, a daughter of his first wife, was the wife of Rev. Dr. Wm. Patten, D. D., of Halifax, Mass., and mother of the Rev. Dr. Wm. Patten, of Hartford, Conn. She was a woman of marked accomplishments. Another daughter, Mary, married Prof. Woodward, of Dartmouth College: Abigail married Prof. Ripley, of the same college. John graduated in the first class of Dartmouth, in 1771, and succeeded his father in the Presidency of the college, which office he filled nearly forty years. His only child, a daughter, became the wife of the Rev. Dr. Allen, of Northampton, and President of Bowdoin College. Two other of Eleazer's sons, Col. Eleazer, and James, also graduated at Dartmouth College.

FRANCIS HUNTINGTON SNOW, born June 29, 1840; married July 8, 1868, Jane Aiken, who was born June 5, 1843. He died September 16, 1908.

There was never an educator in Kansas so well known to its people as Dr. F. H. Snow, and the news of his death in Delafield, Wisconsin, on the twentieth of September, brought a shock of grief and a sense of pain and personal loss to tens of thousands of our citizens. His health had been impaired for about a year, and during that time he had been able to render little active service in his department of university work. But through the summer, which he spent in Wisconsin and Michigan, there had been such improvement in his condition that a complete restoration to health was hoped for. At the last the end came suddenly and almost painlessly.

Francis Huntington Snow was of New England ancestry, and was born in Fitchburg, Mass., June 29, 1840. In 1862 he was graduated from Williams College with the first honors of his class. He taught for a time in the Fitchburg High School, and took a course in the Andover Theological Seminary, but was induced by the late Governor Charles Robinson to come to Kansas as a member of the first faculty of the University of Kansas. Here began the real work of Doctor Snow's life, and from September, 1866, to the day of his death, there was no break in his connection with the institution that he loved so dearly and served so efficiently; this service extended over more than forty-two years. Trained as a classical student, circumstances required Doctor Snow to give himself to scientific studies; and it was in this field that his great work as a teacher and investigator was done. In that first faculty of three men, it was necessary that one man should cover the fields of work that are now distributed among more than two score of instructors; but as the university and its faculty grew, Doctor Snow gradually narrowed the field of his greatest activity, until in the later years of his life the major part of his work was in entomology. In this field he earned an enviable reputation as a scientific investigator. For thirty years he led collecting expeditions to all parts of the country that resulted in giving to the university museum one of the largest and most valuable entomological collections in the United States, and he turned his scientific knowledge to practical account in his plan for saving farm crops from the ravages of the chinch bugs. In addition to these manifold activities, Doctor Snow conducted meteorological investigations of great value, and the last years of his life offered a course of study in organic evolution to advanced students of the university.

In 1890 Doctor Snow was elected the fifth chancellor of the University of Kansas, and in this capacity served with rare acceptance for eleven years, the longest tenure of service for any chancellor in the history of the institution up to the present time. In chancellor Snow's administration the institution began to take on the character of a real university; and the buildings, equipment, size of faculty, and number of students, all practically doubled within this period. In meeting the problems and making the necessary adjustments in a transition period like this, cool judgment and skill are indispensable; and the watchfulness and tact of Chancellor Snow gave to the university numerous points of vantage, and averted many dangers that seemed impending. The arduous labor, the heavy weight of responsibility, and the nervous strain involved in the work of the chancellorship proved too much for the endurance of Chancellor Snow, and his hitherto rugged health gave way. He resigned the chancellorship in 1901, and was appointed to the professorship of Natural History, which position he held for the rest of his life.

Doctor Snow was trained for the Christian ministry, and all his life he was a teacher of men; if he taught from the class-room and the laboratory rather than from the pulpit, none the less he taught lessons of divine truth and righteousness. And his buoyant hope, his inflexible integrity, his tireless energy, his contagious enthusiasm, his loving faith, his simple manliness,— all these touched the lives of those thousands of students with whom he came in contact as a benediction, stimulating them to noble ideals of life and action.

ASAHEL HUNTINGTON, born March 17, 1761, in Norwich, Conn. At an early age he became a Christian and resolved to devote himself to the work of the gospel ministry. Under the teaching of his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Nott, so lately the patriarch of the Connecticut ministry, he fitted for college and entered Dartmouth, where he was graduated in 1786, with the first honors of his class. His scholarship and talent are sufficiently evinced in thus standing first in a class which numbered on its lists such names as those of the Hon. Moses Fiske, Hon. Calvin Goddard, Norwich, Conn., Hon. Charles Marsh, LL. D., of Woodstock, Vt., and the Rev. Dr. Jonathan Strong, S. T. D., of Randolph, Mass.

His theological studies were pursued under those eminent teachers of the day, the Rev. Dr. Backus of Somers, and the Rev. Dr. Hart of Griswold, Conn., by both of whom he was commended, as one eminently worthy of the holy office on which he had set his heart.

At the earnest solicitation of the church and society in Topsfield, Mass., he was ordained there to the work of the gospel ministry, November 12, 1789. While here, successfully engaged in his work, he married, June 2, 1791, Alethea, daughter of Dr. Elisha Lord, a celebrated physician of Abington, Conn., in whom he found a most timely and efficient helpmeet.

Of his labors in Topsfield, I am happy to quote the following testimonial from the interesting address given by the Hon. Nehemiah Cleveland, at the Topsfield Bi-centennial Celebration. In the address itself, he speaks of the most useful and acceptable ministry, of the plain good sense, of the unfailing discretion, of the mild benevolence and the blameless life, which made Mr. Huntington so safe a model and so sure a guide. In a note, in which he speaks more in detail of the life of Mr. Huntington, he says: "Here for nearly twenty-four years, flowed on the even and useful tenor of his way. With a people not particularly easy to please, he lived in unbroken harmony. He was orthodox in his opinions, but was too discreet to urge them with offensive pertinacity. His preaching was plain, sensible, and practical. His whole intercourse with his flock was so marked by social ease, by benevolent solicitude, and by judicious kindness, that he secured their warmest love, as well as esteem. His instructions were not confined to the pulpit. Compelled by the straitness of his income, and the wants of a growing family, he occasionally taught the town school. For several years before his death, he received into his family, pupils from abroad. With what fidelity and ability he acquitted himself in this relation, many still remember. The language of affectionate veneration with which, at the late celebration, Judge Cummings and Mr. Benjamin A. Gould recalled the name and virtues of their earliest teacher, will not soon be forgotten by the hundreds who listened to those glowing words of praise and gratitude."

"In the midst of his strength and usefulness, this truly good man was suddenly cut down. He died of the malignant sore throat, April 22, 1813, after an illness of four days. The funeral sermon was preached to a weeping audience by his intimate and long tried friend, Rev. Isaac Braman of New Rowley."

Of Mrs. Huntington, the widow thus bereaved, who spent her last years in the family of her eldest son, where she died, August 31, 1850, in the eighty-fourth year of her age, we have this testimonial in an obituary notice taken from the Puritan Recorder:

"Mrs. Huntington was particularly happy in her relation to the church and people of Topsfield. There was a blending of dignity and gentleness in her person, that prepossessed every one in her favor. Her intercourse with the people was marked by prudence, kindness and condescension, by a lively sympathy in their joys and sorrows, and by many self-denying labors to do good among them. The writer knows not that she ever had an enemy; he is certain that she had many friends. Through all her earthly pilgrimage it was the aim of this excellent woman to live not unto herself. Her own comforts, and even wants, were forgotten in self-denying efforts for the good of others.

It was her pleasure to nurse the sick and minister to the afflicted; and many living witnesses gratefully recall her fearless and faithful devotion to them in the hour of suffering and danger. In the closing scenes of her life, there were the calmness and peace, if not the triumphs of Christian faith. Her remains were deposited in the burying ground at Topsfield, by the side of that dust over which she had so many times shed, during her long widowhood, the tears of fond remembrance."

ELISHA HUNTINGTON, born April 9, 1796, in Norwich, Conn.; graduated at Dartmouth in 1815, and received his medical diploma. He commenced his professional life in Lowell, to which place he had removed in 1824, two years before the incorporation of that city. In the following year, May 31, 1825, he married Hannah, daughter of Joseph and Deborah Hinckley, of Marblehead, who was born October 2, 1800. As a physician and as a citizen, he rapidly rose to a deserved eminence in the enterprising city in which he had located himself. Perhaps few of its citizens have been more esteemed for an intelligent and practical interest in every movement which has promised to promote the prosperity of his adopted city, or of his native state. His name is identified with their educational, social, and civil progress. Both as the mayor of Lowell for several years, and as lieutenant governor of the State, he discharged his public duties with very great acceptance. Huntington Hall, by order of the city government named from him, will long be a faithful witness to the public esteem in which he was held.

On the death of Dr. Elisha Bartlett, M. D., late professor in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York, Dr. Huntington was appointed by the Middlesex North District Medical Society to prepare a suitable commemorative address. This excellent tribute was delivered before that body, December 26, 1855, and published by them.

His wife died September 19, 1859, how much lamented, the following obituary notice, from the Journal and Courier, of Lowell, attests: "It is seldom the grave closes over any one among us who has left so many holy, pleasant, and enduring recollections as cluster about the memory of Mrs. Huntington. Early a resident of our city, she had gathered about her a large circle of friends, who enjoyed her intelligence and cultivation, and who will never forget her kindness and hospitality, as well as her ready sympathy in all that interested them. In the death of Mrs. Huntington, the poor and suffering have indeed lost a friend, whose words of kindness and counsel as well as her unostentatious charities, have soothed and gladdened many a sorrowful heart. He died December 13, 1865.

He married, second, July 17, 1873, Louisa W. F. Dana. She was born October 24, 1842, and died May 26, 1904. Mr. Huntington died May 18, 1906.

He was engaged in the hardware business in Marietta, O. He was in the Union Army and on October 3, 1861, was commissioned as 2d Lieut. of the 1st Ohio Light Artillery. On November 4, 1861, he was commissioned as Captain of Battery 4 1st Ohio Light Artillery. His Battery was soon after attached to General Landers' command and operated in the Shenandoah Valley. He served in this Valley during Jackson's raid. Later he was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, and took part in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg.

After Gettysburg he was invalided to the Reserve Corps, on which he served in and on the defenses of Washington, and at the confederate prison on Johnson Island, Lake Erie. At the battle of Fort Republic, and at Chancellorsville, he fought his battery until his gunners were bayonetted while serving their pieces. At Hazel Grove and at Chancellorsville his battery rendered distinguished service in repelling Jackson's turning movement.

In this engagement he received injuries which later necessitated his giving up active command of his Battery. At the close of the war he was discharged from the service with the brevet rank of Major.

He was a Unitarian.

WILLIAM REED HUNTINGTON, born at Lowell, Mass., September 20, 1838; married, October 14, 1863, Theresa, daughter of Dr. Edward and Margaret Wendell (Phillips) Reynolds, of Boston. She was born December 29, 1837, and died September 24, 1872. Her mother was a sister of Wendell Phillips.

He graduated from Harvard College in 1859. He was Class Poet, and also Phi Beta Kappa poet in 1870. He was assistant in Chemistry at Harvard, under Prof. J. P. Cooke, for one year after graduation. He then studied for the ministry of the Episcopal Church under Rev. Frederick Dan Huntington (afterwards Bishop of Central New York), and was his assistant at Emanuel Church, Boston. On December 3, 1862, he was ordained as a priest at All Saints Church, Worcester, Mass., and on the same day began his rectorship of that Church, which continued for twenty-one years.

On November 1, 1883, he became rector of Grace Church, New York, and so continued until his death, which occurred at Nahant, Mass., July 26, 1909.

From 1871 until his death, he was a delegate to the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, and took a most active part in the House of Deputies.

He was the author of the following works:
The Church Idea, an essay Towards Unity, 1870.
Conditional Immortality, 1878.
The Causes of the Soul, A Book of Sermons, 1891.
The Peace of the Church, The Bohlen Lectures for 1891.
The Good Shepherd and Other Sermons, 1906.

The one dominant purpose of his whole life was the furtherance of Church Unity (organic unity and not mere federation). In 1870 he published the "Church Idea," which embodies his hopes for unity, and portrays the possibilities of the Episcopal Church as the germ of the "church of the reconciliation."

At the end of an address which he delivered at the Church Congress in Boston, in May, 1909, only two months before he died, he quoted from a sermon on Church Unity he had preached in Trinity Church, Boston, in 1865, the following passage:

"Allow me to suggest three prominent characteristics by which a truly National Church in this country would be known. Let us term them the conditions of American Catholicity. They are these: a simple creed, a varied worship, a generous polity."

He then closed his address with these words:

"For these principles I have, during the four and forty years, through evil report and through good report, contended; and by them I stand, strengthened by the ancient watchword, 'Hope on, hope ever.'"

Here follow extracts from a tribute to his memory published in The Outlook, shortly after his death.

"Probably no church in New York is known to a larger number of people throughout the United States than Grace church. One of the most perfect churches architecturally in the country, the lovely bit of garden by which it is framed emphasizes its position on Broadway, where the tides of life rise and fall six days in the week. To many people this fine structure, with its religious atmosphere, its dignified services, and its delightful music, has been, by reason of its wealth and the social prominence of its membership, only a "fashionable church." As a matter of fact, it is one of the most generous and active churches in the country, carrying on a work which would tax the strength of many large communities, with a rector as devoted as the most consecrated missionary, and as burdened with work as a pioneer preacher on the frontier."

"What might have been a church of the idle rich was under his ministry, as under that of his predecessor, Bishop Potter, a church of tireless workers; a pulpit which might have been the vantage-ground for the display of oratorical gifts, or for self-advertising in some of its many forms, was a place of inspiration and spiritual leadership; a parish which might have tempted a man to spend himself in restless energy seemed to confirm Dr. Huntington's habits as a student and thinker. He had a singularly quiet spirit in the central roar and tumult of the great city; he was a self-effacing preacher of the highest truth from a pulpit of the greatest prominence; one of the most tireless organizers in the metropolis, he was one of its most studious and meditative men. His sermons were never what used to be called "great efforts"; for Dr. Huntington had both the preaching and the literary instinct, and his pulpit utterances were notable for a certain beautiful simplicity, which was not only an expression of the fine sincerity of his nature, but of his ripe culture and his sense of art in writing. There was a vein of poetry in him, and occasionally his initials appeared in connection with some striking sonnet called forth by some appeal to his imagination or to his quick moral sense. His courage was as pronounced as his quietness of manner, and the prophet in him lost no whit of force because he did not go about clad in rough garments or make his home in the desert."

"He recognized the power and place of ritual, and he succeeded in his efforts for the revision of the Prayer Book of his Church; at the same time he conducted services in his church so simple that people unacquainted with his Church's ritual felt at home while participating in them. He was a believer in the dignity and the greatness of his communion, and was proud to be called a Churchman; but he was a leader within his own Church in more than one movement for affiliation with other bodies of Christians; he was a supporter in particular of the successful effort to open the pulpit of the churches of his communion to ministers of other denominations, and for over forty years was a staunch advocate of church union. As a preacher he was scholarly and devout, and he avoided the sort of publicity into which clergymen often find it easy to enter by means of sermons on public and current events; and yet he did not hesitate to speak clearly on matters of even a political nature whenever they called for moral judgment. He was a devoted follower and worshipper of Jesus Christ, and he acknowledged his Master as a friend and companion; but he had a faith which was not exclusive, but inclusive, and which compassed others whose faith was not as his."

"As preacher, organizer, spiritual guide and consoler this rare man hid his own griefs and trials behind his vocation as the teacher and helper of his fellows. His reticence about himself seemed to concentrate all his power on helpfulness for others. His life was lived under the shadow of a great bereavement, so sacred in its memories that it was rarely if ever spoken of in his presence; but his deep and beautiful fidelity to one dear memory sent sadness through his whole nature, and gave him a rare power of consolation. The open grave of a stranger was to him a place of personal sorrow, and every grief to which he ministered was interpreted by his own grief. His sympathy was quick and fertile in resource, and his first thought was one of practical helpfulness. But his keen intelligence kept guard over his generous nature, and his service was as wise as it was heartfelt. In his own communion his lifelong effort was to bring men of divergent views to a better understanding and a more efficient co-operation. His clearness and quickness of mind, his precision and force of statement, his wit and his ironic spirit were best seen in the General Conventions of the Episcopal Church. He was the most effective debater in these assemblies, and always a wise and far-seeing leader. Thoroughly in sympathy with the democratic movement of the age, and a consecrated servant of humanity, Dr. Huntington never spoke smooth words when fiery ones were needed; never courted popular favor; never sought recognition of any kind; more than once refused to be made a bishop; was unspoiled by universal affection, and uncorrupted by reputation and influence; wore to the end the white flower of a blameless and beautiful life; and died, as he had lived, calmly, quietly, doing his work to the very end."

ASAHEL HUNTINGTON, born July 23, 1798, in Topsfield, Mass.; fitted for college at Phillip's Academy, Andover, Mass., and entered Yale in 1815, where he graduated in 1819. After leaving college he commenced his legal studies at Newburyport. and, after some interruptions, completed them at Salem, Essex county, Mass., in 1824. In March of that year, he was admitted to the bar, and commenced the practice of law at Salem, and continued in practice with marked success and high reputation, until 1851. During this time, he was repeatedly a member of the legislature of Massachusetts. In 1853, he was a member of the constitutional convention in that state; and the same year was mayor of Salem. He was attorney for the county of Essex; attorney for the district, consisting of the counties of Essex, and Middlesex, in the administration of criminal cases; and when the district was divided, held the same office for the district of Essex. In 1851, he was appointed clerk of all the courts in Essex county; when he retired from practice, and accepted the office, which he held until his death. He was for many years an active and efficient promoter of the temperance reform; in his official capacity, as well as in private life, he devoted his time, talents, and services to the cause; and as a legislator, and advocate, he was instrumental in advancing its interests and promoting its success.

Mr. Huntington married, August 15, 1842, widow Tucker, of Salem, whose maiden name was Caroline Louisa Deblois. He died in Salem, Mass., after a brief illness, September 5, 1870.

He pursued his early studies with his pastor, Rev. Dr. Nott, and was a companion and fellow pupil with the no less venerable Dr. Eliphalet Nott of Union College. After pursuing his medical studies with Dr. Lord, about the year of 1794, he removed to the banks of the Susqnehanna, and located himself at Unadilla, New York.

Here he became a successful and deservedly popular physician. His rides extended often forty and fifty miles, and a more welcome visitor never entered those scattered homes. In this laborious field, journeying by day and by night, often winding his solitary way along almost untrodden paths, and fording unbridged streams, he was both a cheerful and happy man and a skillful and prosperous physician. He accumulated a handsome property, and attained the highest honors in the gift of his townsmen. He was a member of the New York assembly from Otsego County, from 1804 to 1810. In 1813 he removed to Cairo in Greene County, N. Y., where he continued to reside until his death, July 13, 1847.

Dr. Huntington made a profession of religion in 1816, joining the Presbyterian church. He was ever a consistent member of the church, of which he was also an elder at the time of his death. He was a very retiring man, abounding much more in the good deeds of an excellent spirit, than in ostentatious professions. He was a most genial and companionable man, just such as every one hails as a friend. He had no enemy, and his memory is yet fragrant with the most precious savor of his generous and sanctified nature.

This family which consisted of seven children, five of them dying in infancy, were all born at Unadilla, N. Y.

ISAAC HUNTINGTON, born February 5, 1688, and married February 21, 1715–16, Rebecca, great-grand-daughter of Rev. John Lathrop, of England, and later of Scituate and Barnstable, Mass. He was early brought into the public service, in which he continued all his life. He was a professed Christian, having entered the church in 1731, on whose records his name often occurs, in relations which show he was regarded as a sound and safe ecclesiastical counselor. He was appointed, October 21, 1746, on a committee, with Simon Tracy, his cousin Daniel, and Philip Turner, to "labor for the conviction and recovering of the Separates." These were the irregular and heterodox members of the church to which he belonged. He was, as successor to his father, chosen town clerk, December 6, 1726, yet had performed the duties of the office, from an apparently unknown date, commencing his services during the official period of his father, and with the aid of his son Benjamin, continuing them down to his own death, the last entry, by his hand, being on the 9th day of January, 1764, but a little more than a month previous to his death. This record was "examined" and attested by his son. He died, in the homestead built by his father, on soil taken from the Indians, February 23, 1764, transmitting both his home and his office to his youngest son. His widow died April 27, 1774.

CHILDREN.

This family were all born and recorded in Norwich.

1. REBECCA, born November 17, 1717, and died June 5, 1725.
2. ISAAC, born August 25, 1719. He purchased land in the New Concord Society of Norwich, now Bozrah, in 1744, where he married, January 24, 1749–50. Lucy Edgerton. He was a substantial farmer, and a prominent man in the town. He was a member of the Connecticut Convention in 1788, which ratified the Constitution of the United States. He died, having had no children, March 23, 1799, as his gravestone attests, "in hope of a glorious immortality." Lucy, his widow, died May 4, 1800, in her 77th year.
3. SARAH, born April 17, 1721.
4. NEHEMIAH, born January 2, 1722–3, and married, March 14, 1748–9, Lois Hinckley, of Lebanon, Conn. She was daughter of Gershom and Mary (Bird) Hinckley, and was born in Lebanon, September 24, 1727. They had no children. He was a man of property and enterprise, having established the Iron Works in the eastern part of Bozrah, which were subsequently improved by Nehemiah Huntington Fitch, who purchased the property. The Iron works were removed many years since, and on the same ground now stands the beautiful village, built and improved by the brothers Fitch. The following is the inscription on his gravestone in the Bozrah burying ground: "In memory of Nehemiah Huntington, Esq., a worthy officer both in church and state — beneficent, hospitable, and pious — a kind and tender husband, an indulgent master and a good neighbor. He died June 16, 1780."

   His widow married in 1782, Dr. Elisha Tracy, the distinguished physician of Norwich. Her gravestone stands by the side of her first husband's in the Bozrah burying ground, and has the following inscription: "In memory of Lois Tracy, relict of Dr. Elisha Tracy, who died October 3, 1790, in the 63rd year of her age, having been a few years separated from Nehemiah Huntington, Esq., her former husband."
5. DORCAS, born February 23, 1724–5, and married, May 13, 1745, William Lathrop of Norwich. There is no other record connected with their names than that of his death, July 15, 1770.

and honored man. He was a member of the Connecticut legislature in 1791. Though early called into the service of his country, having served in three campaigns of the old French War, he preferred the less exposed and less noticed, yet none the less useful, life of a farmer.

His first wife died April 9, 1770, and he married, the second time, March 21, 1771, Lydia, daughter of Thomas and Ann (Bingham) Baldwin, who was born, October 19, 1740.

After a distressing confinement of eleven years, with an obstinate rheumatic complaint, induced at first by his exposures in his military campaigns, he died in Bozrah, March 20, 1814.

The following extracts from his correspondence, during his third and last campaign, are here inserted, as illustrative of the character of the man, and as containing authentic history of those days. From the camp at Fort Ontario, August 8, 1760, he thus writes to his father in Norwich, Conn.: "After a long and tedious march of thirty-one days from Schenectady, I arrived at this place in good health, the 29th of July. I call our passage from Schenectady to this place a march, though we came by water all the way, only at three carrying places for we were obliged to wade a good part of the way up the Mohawk River to Fort Stanwix, at the head of the river, which is about 140 miles from Schenectady. In this distance there is one carrying place of about one mile. From Fort Stanwix, we carry about one mile again, and then take Wood Creek, which runs to the westward, and is a very small stream running into Oneida Lake. * * * Yesterday the two snows that we have in this (Ontario) Lake went down it, one of twenty and the other of eighteen guns, with a party of batteaux with them containing about 2,000 men. I expect the remainder of the army will go after them to-morrow or the next day, at furthest, to give the French a visit at Oswegoehwe."

Camp at Montreal, 10th September, 1760.

Honored Father:

We landed on this Island, about eight miles above the city, last Sunday, and marched down within about two miles of the city, where we encamped without any opposition. Monday the French General capitulated. The inhabitants of Canada are to enjoy their habitations and become subjects of Great Britain. The regular troops are to be held as prisoners of war, and they are about four thousand. The Indians have never given us any trouble, but rather fallen in on our side.

Sir, you have doubtless heard of our success at Fort Levec, now William Augustus, on the 17th of August. We took a brig of fourteen guns and 120 men, within sight of the fort. There we landed on the two islands, on one side of the island that the French fort was on, and on the main on the other side of it; and began to entrench and build batteries—the French firing upon our men from their fort, but doing but little damage. The 23d we got our batteries open, and began to play upon them from the two islands and the main. The 25th, in the afternoon, the French surrendered and were all made prisoners of war. There were about 300 men in the fort, and they had thirty-five pieces of cannon, but no bombs. I cannot tell how many men we lost, but our loss is but small. Col. Fitch lost two men by the wounds on board our snows. The 31st we embarked at Fort William Augustus for this place, and we lost as many men in coming as we did at the siege, by reason of the falls in the river. Capt. Smith, from New London, had five men drowned. * * *

Sir, we have orders for all the Provincials to march to-morrow morning back to Oswego, which gives the regiments a great deal of uneasiness; for we are now 271 miles from Oswego, and one half of the way a strong current, and it is not further, I suppose, from Albany by way of Crown Point, which way we always expected to go. The reason of our going by the way of Oswego, I cannot tell unless it be to work on the fort. * * * * * *

Honored Sir, these lines leave me in good healtth, as I have been ever since I left home, for which I desire to be thankful. Let God have the praise of our success over the enemy; and may we never have occasion for another campaign in this country again.

Sir, your most obedient son,

ELIJAH HUNTINGTON.

P. S. The city of Montreal is about a mile in length and half a mile in breadth, within the walls. Gen. Amherst lies above the city, with about 10,000 men; Gen. Murray, from Qnebec, below it, with about 4,000 soldiers and 3,000 marines; and Col. Haviland, from Crown Point, with about 6,000 men on the other side of the river."

ISAAC HUNTINGTON, born November 7, 1775, in Norwich, Conn. He was a farmer and occupied till his death, a part of the territory first taken up by his ancestor in Bozrah. He was a very retiring and unambitious, yet estimable man, and was always held in esteem in his neighborhood. He married, November 27, 1807, Hannah, daughter of Joshua and Hannah (Dart) Maples, who was a most affectionate and excellent woman, and a member of the Baptist church. She died March 24, 1838, aged 52 years. He married again, April 30, 1839, Mrs. Esther, widow of Dr. Scott, of Bozrah. He died June 27, 1842, his widow surviving him several years.

3. LYDIA BALDWIN, born September 6, 1813. She was the subject of a revival of religion in Bozrah, in 1830 and '31, and was propounded for admission to the Congregational church, but the scarlet fever entered the family and suddenly withdrew her to the church above. She died September 2, 1831.
4. HANNAH DART, born September 3, 1815, married Henry W. Hough, M. D., son of William Hough of Bozrah. He was located in the practice of medicine in North Killingly, and still later in Putnam. For many years she was the subject of a most afflictive physical disorder, in the progress of which she lost all power of locomotion, so that she became as helpless, physically, as a babe. Yet with unexampled patience, and with a serene and quiet smile, she would sit all day, and with the only motion of her arm left under her control, turn over the leaves of some book, which she was reading, or wave the fan, whose cool breath she could yet feel. She died January 7, 1855, a peaceful and hopeful death. Her husband married, again, Mary Tripp, of Putnam, and was in 1862 a surgeon in the Union army.

WINSLOW TRACY HUNTINGTON, born August 25, 1807, in Bozrah, Conn. He entered early on the study of medicine, and received his diploma from the Pittsfield Medical School in 1829. He commenced almost immediately, after graduating, the practice of his profession, in East Haddam, Conn., where he made good proof of his skill, and won for himself the confidence and esteem of a large circle of patrons and friends. He married, June 1, 1830, Almira Carson, of Pittsfield, Mass. In the summer of 1834, Dr. H. went to Albany, where he was invited by a circle of friends, to establish himself in business. He remained there only a few months, and located himself in Brooklyn, now Ohio City, where he rapidly secured an extensive practice, and at the same time engaged in speculations in real estate. While here, his wife died, in February, 1838. He married, for his second wife, in Akron, Ohio, July 12, 1840, widow Julia (Swift) Babcock, daughter of Chief Justice Swift of Windham, Conn., author of the Digest of Connecticut Laws. He removed to Akron, Ohio, where he fell a victim to his professional duty, dying December 23, 1849, from a wound received at a post mortem examination. He was a warm friend, generous to others rather than just to himself, an earnest inquirer after truth, both in reference to his profession and to religion, and as eager to propagate, as to embrace, whatever he felt convinced was true.

Mr. Barnes is a graduate of Kenyon College, of the year 1868, and Lane Theological Seminary, 1872. He is a Presbyterian minister. In the Union Army during the Civil War, he belonged to what was known in the State of Ohio as the "Squirrel Hunters."

"The men of Ohio who, at the call of the Governor, volunteered for the defense of the State, when Kirby Smith was threatening to enter it near Cincinnati, were called "Squirrel Hunters," from the fact that these men armed themselves with such arms as they possessed, consisting of rifles, and shotguns, which they were accustomed to use in hunting squirrels and other game. They served the State about six weeks, and, although the "Squirrel Hunters" volunteered to serve without pay, the Ohio Legislature recently passed a Bill giving the "Squirrel Hunters" one month's pay, ($13.)"

Mr. Barnes and his family live in Clintonville, O.

NEHEMIAH HUNTINGTON, born April 20, 1782. He was for many of his earlier years an invalid, so much so that he lost almost entirely the years usually devoted to education. But he was characterized through life for his sterling good sense and judgment, and still more for his gentle and kind heart. If anything else was needed to render him beloved and esteemed, and trusted by all who knew him, it was his strict conscientiousness. He seemed to feel no other motive than duty: and how faithful he was to every conviction of duty, they best knew who saw him most. He married, for his first wife, September 8, 1814, Nancy, an older sister of his brother Elijah's wife; and he found in her all those qualities and attainments he most prized and needed. She had mental endowments of a high order, and a personal culture which fitted her to grace any circle in which she might move. She was no less gifted with the graces of the spirit; being characterized for a piety as uniform and earnest as it was unobstrusive. She was most happy and skillful in the social and religious training of the family; yet she was felt to be as well fitted to lead in the social gatherings of her sisters in the church.

How harmoniously two such kindred spirits would move along through life together, was foreshadowed by a little incident, which transpired soon after their marriage. The one had been accustomed to regard the evening of Saturday as a part of the Christian Sabbath, and the other observed that of Sunday. They engaged a perpetual regard for each others convictions, by a systematic avoidance of all work and secular pastime on both evenings, though they taught their children to reverence the evening of Sunday as sacred time.

Mrs. H. died July 12, 1835, most deeply lamented, yet not to be forgotten by those who had enjoyed her acquaintance. "I know of no one, so well prepared to go, and of no one whom we shall miss so much," was the heartfelt testimony of one of her neighbors, who had known her long and well. And many years after her death, the gifted Mrs. Sigourney was pleased to give her testimonial to the personal worth of one "whose friendship I so much prized." Mr. H. married, for his second wife, December 21, 1841, Mrs. Anne, widow of Jirah I. Hough, and daughter of Timothy and Sorloma (Strong) Hinckley, of Lebanon, a most amiable and excellent woman. He was chosen deacon of the church in Bozrah, several years before his death. From the commencement of the sabbath school and temperance enterprises, in this country, he was in theory and practice, a warm friend of both. Indeed, in every work which promised to promote human comfort or salvation, he was ever ready to engage. He was as steadily at his place in the prayer meeting in the busiest season of the year, as in his seat on Sunday in the church. This good man was taken to his rest, June 2, 1852, leaving, it is believed, no enemy behind him.

3. ELISHA TRACY, born December 28, 1817, and married in Norwich, September 2, 1844, Malvina, daughter of Dr. Thomas Boswell. He was a jeweler, and the character he bore, and the esteem he secured, are well set forth in the sermon preached by his pastor, Rev. Dr. Bond, on the Sabbath following his death. His disease had been one inexpressibly trying and painful, and terminated his useful life, on Wednesday, February 16, 1859. "The example of an esteemed member and brother of our church, who, since the last sabbath has 'finished his course,' furnishes a fresh and convincing illustration of the power there is in the hope of salvation to sustain and cheer the soul amidst the pains of protracted disease, and in the hour of death. For many a month he has borne his life-wasting sufferings in the patience of hope. With cheerfulness and consideration he set his house in order, in prospect of death, and when the expected crisis came, it found him so peaceful, so cheerful, so hopeful, so full of love, that the scene was divested of those sad and painful sensations, so often awakened in the chamber of death. He looked at death with the eye of faith, and in the light of hope—looked at it as a sleep in Jesus—from which he fully expected to awake to a higher and purer life in that kingdom where he had laid up treasures for eternity."

Elijah Baldwin Huntington, born August 14, 1816, in Bozrah, Conn.; married March 6, 1843, in Windham, Conn., Julia Maria, daughter of Deacon Thomas and Laura (Lathrop) Welch, of Windham, Conn. She was born May 25, 1817, in Windham, Conn.

Mr. Huntington was a preacher and a teacher and genealogist. He was a graduate of Yale college in the class of 1840, and received from that College an honorary master's degree in 1851. He was licensed to preach by the New London Association of Congregational Ministers in 1845. He was ordained pastor of a church in Putnam, Conn., in 1848, and was there until 1850; was dismissed from this charge on account of vocal weakness, after which he engaged in teaching, and devoted a large portion of his time to the preparation of the Huntington Memoir, which he published in 1863. From that time to the date of his death, he spent his leisure hours in collecting and compiling material for a second edition, which he hoped to print. The data which he gathered have mysteriously disappeared.

Mr. Huntington published the Huntington Memoir, Genealogy of the Lathrop Family, Soldier's Memorial, and History of Stamford. He lived in Bozrah, Windham, North Killingly, Meriden, Stamford and Putnam, Conn., also in South Coventry Conn., where he died, December 27, 1877. A tribute from the I. O. O. F. "In early life Brother Huntington became a member of the Central Baptist Church and was very active there for several years. After his marriage he transferred by letter to the Stewart St. Baptist Church, of which his wife was a member. Our brother was strongly attached to the Order of Odd Fellows, and formed among the brethren of that Order some of the sweetest and dearest friendships.' He was able therein to perform some of his best work in assisting others, and was consequently active and happy among the brethren there from March 11, 1873, when he joined Crescent Lodge, No. 24, the remainder of his life. He was Recording Secretary of the Lodge two different terms covering several years, Financial Secretary two years, and Treasurer several years."

ELIZABETH (HUNTINGTON) DAVENPORT, born in Norwich, November 1, 1725. She was married in Windham, by the Rev. Stephen White, November 16, 1750, to the Hon. Abraham, son of Rev. John and Martha (Gould) Davenport, of Stamford, Conn. Her husband was born in Stamford, 1715, and graduated at Yale, 1732. He was a most worthy, and truly noble man, sustaining many offices, civil and military, with very marked ability. "Colonel Davenport was possessed of a vigorous understanding and invincible firmness of mind, and of a weight of character which for many years decided, in this county, almost every question to which it was lent. He was early a professor of religion, and adorned its doctrines by an exemplary conformity to its precepts." He was for many years one of the council of the state, and at his death was judge of the Fairfield county court. "Of his country and all its great interests he was a pillar of granite." So testifies no lower authority than Dr. Dwight, to the character of Colonel Davenport. His wife, who was quite infirm, for the last few years of her life, died December 17, 1773. After her death he married again, August 8, 1776, Mrs. Martha Fitch. He died in 1789.

Mathew Huntington, born March 20, 1720–21, married, in 1742, Elizabeth Heath, of Preston, daughter of Richard Adams, of Massachusetts, and in 1745 removed to Mansfield, Conn. He was appointed first Lieutenant in 1755. He was engaged in the French War of 1756–'60; for which he enlisted a company of about sixty soldiers from Mansfield and vicinity, and started with them for the seat of the war on Lake George. In attempting to take up the Hudson, a number of barges, the task proved more than a match for the strength of his company. One after another of his men gave out, and to supply the deficiency, as far as possible, he exerted himself all the more earnestly, aiding with his own muscular arms the tugging at the boats, until he succeeded in taking his entire charge over the last rapids in his way. But he had overtaxed his mortal powers, and he fell suddenly, a victim to exertions which were deemed even in that day of prodigies, almost superhuman. He died at Greenbush. His widow subsequently married Capt. Peleg Heath. An old sword which he used, about four feet long, with an immense guard above the hilt nearly ten inches in diameter, was for several years in the family, but was subsequently worked up into butcher knives.

GEORGE HUNTINGTON REYNOLDS, born February 8, 1829, in Mansfield, Ct.; married Abbie E. Brown, of Westfield, Vt. He died January 3, 1906.

He was the ninth of twelve children, and early in life he became responsible for his own support. As boys, he and his brothers built bridges and made their own wagons, sleds and other playthings, exhibiting much skill. He went to work on a farm at the age of eleven years, working on land that afterwards became a part of the large estate that he established at Mansfield Depot, and at the age of 15 he "hired out" to Chauncey Dunham of Mansfield for $6 a month and "keep." Mr. Dunham living in a house that is still standing on the farm of Edwin Reynolds. Later Mr. Reynolds attended a private school taught by Mr. Dimock, a student from Yale, and then he went to work as a woolen mill spinner, and was employed at Ludlow, Mass., Broad Brook, Wilsonville and Merrow, Conn., successively.

In the mill at Merrow he did his first mechanical construction work, and did it so successfully that he decided to give up spinning and thereafter devoted himself to mechanical work.

He began work on steam machinery at Leominster, Mass., and in 1856 exhibited an engine of his own designing at the American institute fair in the Crystal Palace, New York. For this he was awarded a gold medal and was made superintendent of the fair for the following year.

In 1859 he was appointed chief draughtsman of the Delamater Iron Works and in 1862 he became superintendent and general manager of the Mystic Iron works at Mystic Bridge. Here ships and engines for the use of the government during the Civil war were built and when the war was over he returned to the Delamater works, of which he became superintendent, holding this position until 1884, when he went to the Crane Elevator Company of Chicago and took charge of their large plant. This company was absorbed by the Otis Elevator Company and he was continued in the concern's employ as engineer. He has been consulting engineer for the Pneumatic Dynamite Gun Company of New York and the Locomobile Company of America. He made a special study of the problems of elevator building and dynamite gun construction, and, as a result of his inventions in these and other lines, over one hundred patents were taken out by him, some of these patents being very valuable, covering important improvements made by him. He has built guns for England and Italy, and the gun construction of the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius was from the patents owned by him and done under his personal supervision.

In 1885 he established an estate at Mansfield Depot, and erected a handsome residence there. The farm is one of a thousand acres, and for a number of years past Mr. Reynolds had resided there constantly, giving his attention to improving the place. For many years his home was at Pelham Manor, N. Y., and he served as president of the school board of that place eight years.

fined on a prison ship until October 24, 1777, and then sent to Lieut.-General Sir Henry Clinton, commanding British army in New York City, and by arrangement, placed on parole as prisoner of war, in exchange for Captain William Farquhar, H. B. M. 20 Regiment Foot, who had been captured at the Convention of Saratoga, October 17, 1777. Captain Amos Huntington was not exchanged and released from his parole as a prisoner of war until March, 1782, his continental service having thus embraced a period of four years and about ten months. He subsequently devoted himself to the peaceful pursuits of husbandry, and enjoyed the confidence, and shared in the honors awarded by his fellow citizens. He was emphatically a peace maker. He died in Shaftsbury, July 2, 1822, a member of the Baptist church.

ALONZO HUNTINGTON, born September 1, 1805, in Shaftsbury, Vt.; married, November 28, 1833, Patience Lorain Dyer, she was a daughter of Daniel Dyer, one of the early settlers of that part of the country. She was born in Clarendon, Rutland Co., Vt., August 6, 1801. He studied law in Buffalo with the Hon. J. T. Hatch, and commenced business in Wayne Co., N. Y., where he practiced about two years, removing then to Chicago, where he opened his office in 1835. He engaged extensively in the land speculation of the next few years, but was driven from the fruitless operation by the revulsions of 1837, and returned to the practice of law. He was elected in 1836–7 state's attorney for the seventh Illinois circuit for two years, and on the expiration of this term he was re-elected for the same period, during which he showed himself an energetic and efficient prosecuting officer. He died in 1881. Mrs. Huntington died in Chicago, October 23, 1861. She was held in much esteem, both for her superior mental and social qualities and for her sincere piety; and her sudden death was felt to be no common bereavement. She was a lineal descendant of William Dyer, Secretary of the Rhode Island Colony, Commander-in-chief upon sea against the Dutch for Rhode Island in 1653, and one of the founders of Newport; and his wife Mary, the Quaker, who suffered religious martyrdom on Boston Common in 1660; of Roger Williams, founder and governor of the same colony, and of Captain Edward Hutchinson, of Boston, killed in King Philip's War (1675), and a grand-daughter of Major Gideon Olin, of the Revolutionary Army, who was member of Congress from 1803 to 1807.

He was educated at various private schools in Chicago, and at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. At nineteen he began the study of law, in which he was interrupted by the outbreak of the Civil War. In September, 1861, he raised in Indiana a troop for the Ninth Illinois Cavalry, with which he served but six weeks, resigning his volunteer commission to accept a second lieutenancy in the Fourth United States Artillery, October 24th, 1861. He was engaged in the battle of Shiloh, siege of Corinth, Murfreesborough campaign, battle of Stone's River, action of Woodbury, Tullahoma campaign, and was under fire at Perryville. Promoted to a First-Lieutenancy May, 1863, he served in the Army of the Potomac until the Twelfth Corps was ordered to Tennessee. Detached in 1864 for mustering and disbursing duty, for four months he performed arduous service, involving heavy money responsibility, to the entire satisfaction of the Treasury Department. He then rejoined his battery at Nashville, Tenn., was again detached for recruiting service, and when relieved from that duty, and while serving with his battery at Camp Barry, Washington, D. C., in July, 1865, was appointed Aide-de-Camp to Major General Halleck, whom he accompanied to San Francisco. Relieved from Staff duty at his own request, he rejoined his regiment, and continued to serve therewith at Fort Washington and at Fort Leavenworth, until his resignation November 19th, 1869. He was brevetted First Lieutenant, Captain and Major for "gallant and meritorious services" at the battle of Shiloh, at the battle of Stone's River, and "during the war." On the outbreak of the Railway Riots, July 23d, 1877, he was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General of the First Brigade, Illinois National Guard. His usefulness at that time is attested by letters from the Brigade Commander, the Adjutant-General of the State, and the Governor, and by the order of the letter "reluctantly" accepting his resignation, and thanking him for his devotion "both to the State and Nation in past days of peril, and for his distinguished services in advancing the interests of the Illinois National Guard." Major Huntington's interest in literature was lifelong, and he had contributed to the "Atlantic Monthly," "Lippincott's Magazine," "The Dial," and the "Chicago Tribune," before accepting the literary editorship of the latter in July, 1883. Two years later he resigned his place on "The Tribune" and went to Europe, where, after travel in France, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Belgium and England, a long sojourn at Rome, during which he was presented to the Queen of Italy and to His Holiness Leo XIII, and a residence of ten years at Paris, he finally settled at Versailles. Besides an occasional column on some literary topic in the "Tribune" he wrote the article "Modern Greek Literature" for Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia; the introduction to "Tales from the Ægean," translated from the Greek of Bikelas, a memoir of General Alexander Caldwell McClurg, collaborated as one of the Commission of Four appointed by General Horace Porter, American Ambassador to France, in the compilation of "Les Combattants francais de la Guerre amercaine 1778–1783," published in 1903 by the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and delivered an address on Washington, (February 22, 1904), printed in the Year Book of the American Club of Paris. Major Huntington and Colonel Charles Chaille-Long conducted the ceremony at the inauguration on the 3d of July, 1900, of the statue of Washington in the Place d'Iena, Paris. He was a Knight of the Legion of Honor (France), was a Knight of the Royal Order of the Saviour, (Greece); a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the U. S., (proposed by General Sheridan, General Sackett, and Colonel Loomis); of the Sons of the American Revolution; of the Society of Colonial Wars; of the Chicago Literary Club, of which he was once President; of the American Art Association of Paris, (life); of l'Association pour l'Encouragement des Etudes Grecques en France; of the American Club of Paris, of which he was President (1906); and, until his resignation in 1897, he was a member of the Chicago Club. He was one of the founders and an officer of the Chicago Civil Service Reform League, and for two years a Vice-President of the national organization under the leadership of George William Curtis.

He was an Episcopalian, and died in Versailles, France, July 30, 1907.

HEZEKIAH HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., December 16, 1696. He married for his first wife, July 9, 1719, Hannah Frink, who died September 4, 1746. He married for his second wife, March 23, 1748–9, widow Dorothy Williams, of Bristol, Conn., and she died, February 27, 1774, in her 67th year. In 1721 he and his wife united with the First Congregational Church of Norwich, of which they both became useful members, being himself appointed deacon in 1737. In the civil history of his town and state, he also became a prominent man. He showed himself ever ready to second and aid any enterprise, either in business, in civil or in religious affairs, which promised to promote the secular or religious interests of his native town. He was a member of the Connecticut Council from 1740 to 1743, and again from 1748 to 1773. He was appointed ensign in May, 1728. He attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the Connecticut Militia. As the crisis of our revolutionary history approached, he took a decided stand with the patriots of that day. His name is at the head of that committee of fourteen, of the prominent patriots of Norwich, who were called by their fellow-townsmen to direct the movement of the people, in the threatened conflict with the mother-land. He was prominent in the earnest controversy which ended in making Norwich half-shiretown of the county. He won the third place in that honored trio, consisting of James, (1. 4. 10.) Isaac, his brother, and himself.

He proved himself an intelligent and scholarly man; and we find his name among the subscribers to that work, so rare for its day, the Chronology of Thomas Prince. He was deputy to General Court in May, 1734, and assistant from 1751 to 1756 inclusive. He was appointed Judge of the County Court in 1752, and served in this office, with no less success and distinction than in others he had filled. In the midst of his official duties he died very suddenly, in New London, February 10, 1773. His gravestone in the old burying-ground, in Norwich Town, contains this well-earned tribute: "His piety, affability, prayers and example, wisdom and experience, endeared him to his friends and the State."

JOHN HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., November 14, 1709, and married, November 5, 1735, Civil, daughter of Simon and Mary (Leffingwell) Tracy of Norwich. She was born December 8, 1712, and died February 13, 1748–9. He married, for his second wife, in 1749, Mary, sister of his first wife, who died, March 7, 1786. His name occurs on the town records occasionally among its officers, though he does not seem to have been prominent, as his brothers were. He united with the First Church in Norwich, in 1742, his first wife, who on the record is called Sibil, in 1744, and his second wife in 1758. He was engaged in brewing a considerable portion of his life.

CHILDREN.

1. JOHN, born in Norwich, August, 1736. He graduated at the New Jersey College in 1759, joined the First Church in Norwich in 1760, and received his Master's degree from Harvard in 1763. He entered the Christian ministry, being ordained and installed over the third Congregational church in Salem, Mass., September 28, 1768. His early ministry gave much promise of future usefullness and eminence, but the hopes of his people and friends were soon disappointed. Quick consumption brought him to what all good people thought to be an untimely end. Though he had scarcely made proof of his fine talents, yet he had won a generous confidence in his great abilities, and still more in his deep and fervent piety. He died, without marrying, in Salem, May 30, 1766.

ABEL HUNTINGTON, born February 21, 1777. Pursued his medical studies with Dr. Philemon Tracy of Norwich, and received his diploma from the Connecticut Medical Convention, in April, 1797. In May, 1797, he went to East Hampton, L. I., and entered upon the successful practice of his profession, in which he soon achieved most honorable distinction. In addition to a good medical reputation, he secured also reputation for qualities which fitted him for public service in civil life; and was called, for a while, from his professional career, for the more noisy and stirring duties of political life. In 1820 he was appointed by the legislature of New York a member of the Electoral College, in which he gave his vote to James Monroe. In 1821 he was elected a member of the New York senate. In 1833–7 he was a representative in the United States Congress, from the first congressional district of New York, and through both the twenty-third and twenty-fourth congresses he both by vote and speech showed himself to be a consistent democrat of the Jackson school. In 1845 he was appointed by President Polk, collector of customs for the port of Sag Harbor, and served through the term for which he was appointed. In 1846 he was a member of the convention for revising the constitution of the State of New York. In 1853 the Regents of the New York University conferred on him the honorary degree of M. D. Among the venerable forms present at our pleasant family meeting in Norwich in 1857, none was more so than that of this hale and still youthfully humorous and much beloved and honored man.

He married, in Norwich, Frances Lee, daughter of George Lee of Norwich. He died in East Hampton, May 18, 1858, after three week's illness. His departure was in perfect peace.

photographs and addresses given at the memorial service, held in the Chapel of Auburn Seminary, January 15, 1902.

The following are extracts from a tribute to Dr. Huntington published soon after his death:

He came to Auburn in 1854 from an influential pastorate in Albany. It was a period of reconstruction for the Seminary after a time of weakness and discouragement. With Dr. Hopkins, still a young man from the old Faculty, and Dr. Edwin Hall and Dr. Jonathan B. Condit called at the same time with Dr. Huntington, the Seminary entered upon a new career of growth and wide influence. The best traditions of the elder time were repeated. Until 1867, Dr. Huntington gave instruction in both Old and New Testaments. Then with the appointment of Professor Pierce, one of his pupils, to the chair of the Hebrew language and literature, he gave himself solely to the New Testament. In 1884, Dr. Huntington's work was limited to New Testament criticism, Dr. James S. Riggs becoming Professor of Biblical Greek. In 1892, at the age of eighty, Dr. Huntington was made Professor Emeritus. These facts are significant of the growth of theological education and the enlarging conception and influence of his own work As a pastor, Dr. Huntington received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Columbia College, and the degree of Doctor of Laws many years after from Lafayette.

Only the men who knew Dr. Huntington in his prime can appreciate the varied and effective work he did for Auburn Seminary. The Seminary was his life and he gave himself without stint to its welfare. He was influential in the counsels of trustees and Faculty. His foresight and practical energy were in constant service. He administered the scholarship funds of the Seminary, won new friends for the Seminary, increased its endowment and advanced its instruction.

Influential as he was in these general interests of the Seminary, it was to the special work of teaching that he gave himself. Others might write books, he chose to write upon the hearts of his pupils. To this one thing he gave himself. He had the power and the joy of mission. He was a most acceptable preacher and often sought for, but the sermons were never suffered to interfere with his teaching. Name, praise of men—these were not cared for in the privilege of training men for the ministry. He was a patient, careful, kindly teacher, ministering to the dull and the indifferent with more sense of obligation than to the brilliant. His mind was clear and logical rather than imaginative and mystical. He therefore insisted upon clear analysis and upon system in truth, giving the large outlines of a writer and putting emphasis upon doctrine. He was familiar with the minute exegetical scholarship of recent days and used the tools and results for himself, but did not so much put them into the hands of his pupils as give them the results that satisfied his own judgment. He was a fine example of the older method of teaching.

And his pupils were like his children. He had them upon his heart. He welcomed them to his home. He followed them in their work. He was everywhere the same thoughtful, wise, generous friend.

He was an example to believers in his love of the Church and his service for the higher interests of the city. He was generous in the use of time and means for every good cause. He did not suffer absorbing studies and pressing demands of his profession to be an excuse for the neglect of the common duties and opportunities of the Church. Every pastor thought of him as his right hand man. He was never more happy than in the weekly prayer-meeting, supplementing the address of the leader, catching the thought from some word of prayer or remark of an humble disciple and pouring into it the wealth of his Bible knowledge, his deep experience of God's grace, his earnest desire to be of help to men. It was to the young men who listened a liberal education in spiritual life.

The service in every sphere came from his heart. It was simply the outflow of a rich, cultured, harmonious manhood. There was nothing factitious and professional: it was all genuine, from the life. He had a Puritan conscience and a most serious view of life, and yet such a sense of God's goodness, and such faith in "the all things for good," that he was full of mirth and humor. He loved little children and his childlike spirit bubbled over with joyousness of living. There was conviction with charity. He held to his own views most tenaciously. He saw no reason for changing the early views he formed of the Scriptures and Christian doctrine. But he never bolstered up his own views by condemning those who differed from him. "Mercy and truth" were met together in this life. There was rock in the character, but like the rock of some mountain glen it sent forth its sweet waters and beautiful things grew along the way.

DAVID HUNTINGTON, born April 24, 1788; graduated at Union College in 1808. He studied theology and was ordained deacon of the Protestant Episcopal church, by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Hobart, in Trinity church, New York city, in 1812; and in 1815 was ordained priest in St. Paul's church, Charlton, N. Y. He married for his first wife, Ann Dows of Charlton, N. Y., in 1813. His second wife whom he married in Charlton, also, was Catherine Callegan; and he married for his third wife, Lydia Blakeslee Allen, of Harpersville, N. Y., who still survived in Harpersville, in 1862.

He was a devoted Episcopalian, classing himself neither with the technical High church nor Low church party, maintaining that they who went beyond, or fell below the plain, simple doctrine of the church, were equally erroneous. "In every relation of life he maintained himself without reproach. At times, tried above measure by the cares of the world, and adversities which he could not control, he still preserved his Christian integrity and faith to the end, and ever labored to discharge his duty to the flock to which he was minister." For several years he resided in Harpersville without parochial charge, yet ministering in the name of Christ as he had calls among the neighboring parishes. His former parishioners have fittingly testified their regard for him in the monument they placed to his memory, bearing the noble tribute: "He watched for our souls, as one that must give account." He died in Harpersville, April 9, 1855.

THOMAS HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., March 18, 1664; must have attained some distinction since he appears on the record, toward the close of his life with that title, which in those days had significance, Thomas Huntington, Esq., he being a Justice of the Peace.

He married February 10, 1686–7, Elizabeth, second daughter of Lieut. William and Elizabeth (Pratt) Backus, one of the most enterprising of the Norwich settlers. He was a professed Christian, and as appears from contemporary records, an active and successful business man. In the Fall after his marriage he removed with his cousin Joseph, (1. 3. 4.) to aid in laying the foundations of the new town of Windham. Here his name occurs often in the early records, and always honorably. He received from his father a tract of land, lying to the north of the town of Windham; now lying in the towns of Windham and Mansfield, his own house lot lying in the latter town. Accordingly, at the organization of the Mansfield church, October 18, 1710, Thomas Huntington enters his name with ten others to constitute the new church. His wife's name is recorded among the members, on the 25th of the same month and year. He was ordained deacon, February 20, 1714-15, and is in the record styled Capt. Thomas Huntington. In his will, dated October 31, 1732, he divides his "lands and meadows, in and about the Nauchang Cedar Swamps," to his three sons, Thomas, Jedidiah and Eleazer. His tombstone bears this inscription: "After he had served God and his people, Boath in Church and State, he fell asleep in Jesus, November 7, 1732."

His wife died, December 29, 1728, and was also buried in the Windham burying ground.

Thos. Huntington, as appears from the Windham records, under date of May 13, 1699, "grants to Mr. Samuel Whiting the one-half of a parcel of wilderness land, in the county of Hartford, bounded east by Nipmuc path, northerly, Windham bounds, southerly with Norwich town bounds, and westerly with Shetucket river, the above north bounds to begin at Windham southeast corner."

2. JEDIDIAH, born in Norwich, March 14, 1692–3, where his and his older brother's births are recorded. The only other records found of him are, that notice in the sketch of his father, his admission to the Mansfield church, May 18, 1712, and his death on the Mansfield second book of records, April 2, 1780, aged 87 years.

3. ELIZABETH, born, probably, in Windham, April 17, 1695, as her birth is found on the Windham records. The marriage of Caleb Chappel and Elizabeth Huntington, December 6, 1722, is found on the Lebanon records. It is probably this Elizabeth.

* 4. ELEAZER, born July 28, 1697.

* 5. RUTH, born August 8, 1699.

THOMAS HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, April 22, 1688, and married in Mansfield, September 6, 1711, Elizabeth, daughter of John Arnold. She died in Mansfield, June 25, 1716, and he married for his second wife, in April, 1733. Mehetabel, daughter of James Johnson, of Andover. He joined the Mansfield church, April 21, 1717, and seems to have been an active member. His name occurs on the Windham records, December 14, 1744, as guardian for Dorcas, daughter of his brother Wm. Huntington, and administrator on his estate. He died January 8, 1755. His second wife took with her a letter to the church, July 1, 1733, and died in April 1740.

In 1781, he went to Norwich, Vt., from which place he removed in 1789, to aid in the settlement of Roxbury, in the same state. He embraced the doctrine of universal salvation, and was an approved preacher of that denomination. He spent his last years in Compton, Canada East, where he died, December 14, 1810, and his wife in 1833. From various sources of testimony, he seems to have been a man of unusual tenderness of feeling, kind and generous, and ever ready to do good.

ELIJAH HUNTINGTON, born August 21, 1763. He married, for his first wife, in 1792, Sally Field. of Tunbridge, Vt., who died about a year after the marriage, leaving one son. He married, for his second wife, in June, 1801, Lydia Parmelee, born in Newtown, Ct., August 6, 1779, a most estimable christian lady, who died May 27, 1851, aged 71 years. He was a soldier during the revolution, but a providential accident, as his mother read it, hindered his entering the field as early as his eager patriotism would lead him to do so. He had enlisted and was, as he supposed, all ready to start for the scene of strife on the following day. But, in the afternoon, while using his axe, an ill timed blow struck his foot and disabled him, to his mother's gratitude, for several months. Yet on his recovery he entered the army, and was in service nearly three years. On becoming pious, his Christian zeal, which was habitually ardent and strong, moved him to enter the ministry. He accordingly commenced preaching, and for more than twenty-eight years before his death, he was the useful and much beloved pastor of the Baptist church in Braintree, Vt., where he died, among the bereaved people of his ministry, June 24, 1828.

ELIJAH HUNTINGTON, born November 5, 1793; married at about thirty years of age, Susan Gordon, and lived for a while in Delaware county, Ohio, but in 1825 went to Perrysburg, Ohio, where he spent the rest of his life. He died from cholera, July 26, 1854, and his wife in 1857. He commenced life as a teacher, and in this pursuit took much interest, and met with marked success. In an obituary notice of him, taken from the "Toledo Blade," we find the following testimonial to his worth:

"A good citizen has fallen. We heard of his death with feelings of the most profound regret. For twenty years Mr. Huntington has been a resident of Perrysburg, and during that period he has enjoyed the confidence of the community in which he lived. He was the man perhaps, of all others, that Perrysburg could not afford to lose. Much of the credit which Perrysburg has obtained for its fine system of local education, is doubtless attributed to the valuable services of Mr. Huntington; and the same may be said of almost every enterprise of a public character in that town. He was a far-seeing, sensible man, and well acquainted with the political character of this country. His memory was unbounded. We never knew a person who could more readily refer to events in the past history of parties, even from the commencement of the Government. He knew the character and principles of every public man of note in the nation, and formed his own opinions, from extensive reading and profound reflection. He held successively several of the most important county offices in Wood county, and was once a representative to the legislature from this district. His loss will be severely felt in Perrysburg, and not easily replaced, but while this is true, it will also be true that Perrysburg will long retain the evidence of his wisdom, sagacity, and devotion to her interests, in her schools and other local improvements."

ADONIRAM JUDSON HUNTINGTON, born July 6, 1818; entered Brown University, and was obliged to leave his class in the junior year, on account of health. He went into Virginia and taught, and spent the senior year of his college course in Columbian College, Washington city, where he graduated in 1843, and entered upon a tutorship. In 1846 he was elected professor of the Latin and Greek languages, which post he filled three years. He spent the next three years as pastor of a church in Virginia, when he was re-elected to the professorship he had vacated in Columbian College, and which he continued to fill, until the spring of 1859. He married, June 6, 1844, in Urbanna, Middlesex county, Va., Elizabeth G., daughter of Dr. Richard A. Christian, of that place. He was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Augusta, Ga., from October, 1860, to August, 1865. He then returned to Urbanna, Va. His health was delicate, and on that account he spent nearly two years in Europe. He then returned to Washington, and resumed the chair of Latin and Greek in Columbian University, which he retained during the remainder of his life. He held this professorship, in all, about fifty years. He died in Charles Town, W. Va., in 1905. His wife died there in 1889.

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, born in Mansfield, Conn., and recorded there only, March 27, 1705. He married in Windham, March 12, 1734–5, Mary, daughter of Nathaniel Basset. She died, as appears from the Windham records, June 1, 1740. The date of his death is not on the record; yet he could not have lived many years after his wife, as the note of his brother Thomas' settlement of his estate shows. The list of his "effects personal" in the Windham probate records, exhibits £100, 13s., 11d., as the amount of their valuation. Dea. Ralph Wheelock, husband of (1. 2. 4. 1.) was appointed, December 13, 1745, to complete the settlement of the estate.

CHILDREN.

1. MARY, born in Windham, as is inferred from the entry on the records there, December 19, 1735.
2. DORCAS, born in Windham, September 25, 1737.
3. ELIZABETH, born and died May 6, 1740. This record is found in Norwich.

SIMON HUNTINGTON, born in Mansfield, July 6, 1710. He united with the church, September 22, 1734, and married, December 13, 1734, Ame, daughter of Israel Standish, of Preston, Conn. His name is entered on the Mansfield record as I have spelled it, twice, and his wife's twice. She is also called Ammi. On the Windham records the one is made Simeon and the other Amey. I have found nothing further respecting them than what is entered respecting their children.

Widow Ammi Huntington died, as appears from the Mansfield records, February 24, 1798.

CHILDREN.

1. ELIZABETH, born December 5, 1735, as the Mansfield town records read, and baptized according to the South Mansfield church records, December 4th of the same year,—one instance of many, in which an error has occurred in public records. She died December 3, 1738.

JOHN HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, March 15, 1666; married, December 9, 1686, Abigail, daughter of Samuel Lathrop, who was born in May, 1667. Her father had moved to Norwich from New London, to which place he had gone from Scituate, Mass., in 1648. He was the son of the Rev. John Lathrop, who, for nonconformity, being a preacher in the First Congregational church organized in London, was imprisoned for two years, and who, on being released in 1634, came to this country, and became the first minister of Scituate.

John was, also, as the records show, a man who commanded the respect and esteem of his fellow townsmen.

In 1691, December 21, he was appointed constable in Norwich.

He died between 1695 and 1703, for in the record of General Assembly held at New Haven, October, 1703, is found the following: "This court doth remit to the widow Abigail Huntington what is due from her estate to the Colonie by the seizure of the inspector of Norwich, provided what estate is left out of the list be now added."

CHILDREN, BORN IN NORWICH, CONN.

1. ABIGAIL, born February 19, 1687, and probably married, April 15, 1734, James Calkins of Lebanon, where the marriage is recorded.
2. JOHN, born April 20, 1688, and died December 11, 1690.
* 3. JOHN, born July 4, 1691.
4. HANNAH, born in Norwich, March 25, 1693–4, married April 4, 1725, in Lebanon, John Huit. Such a marriage is on record there; and this I suppose to be the Hannah named.
5. MARTHA, born in Norwich, December 9, 1696; married, June 12, 1717, Noah Grant. From them was descended, in the fourth generation, General and President, Ulysses S. Grant.

This record is in the main as it was published in our first memoir by the Rev. E. B. Huntington in 1863.

The following copy of a deed would seem to conflict, with the above record unless Abigail, and Hannah were married twice. It shows that in 1715 the husband of Abigail was Sheba Hall, and that Hannah was then the wife of Joseph Rockwell.

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, born September 19, 1757; married, February 13, 1783, Prescendia Lathrop, and was one of the first settlers in the Black River valley, in Northern New York. He resided at Watertown. He married for his second wife, December 2, 1810, Elvira Dresser. His first wife was born in Tolland, January 30, 1761, and died March 20, 1810. He died May 11, 1842. The following is an obituary notice found in one of the Watertown papers: "At his residence, on the 11th inst., William Huntington, in the 85th year of his age. Mr. Huntington was one of our oldest and most respected inhabitants. He was a native of Tolland, Conn., and for three or four years served in the Army of the Revolution. In the year 1784 he emigrated to New Hampshire, where he resided till the winter of 1804, when he removed to Watertown. He was for many years a member and an officer of the Presbyterian church, and in the last years of his protracted life it was evident to his friends that the absorbing subject of his contemplation, was his departure from this world; and he cheerfully expressed a readiness to go whenever God in his goodness should see fit to summon him away. He gave pleasing evidence that he was waiting and watching for the coming of the Lord; so that the large circle of his relatives and friends are not left to mourn without hope, but rather to rejoice in the hope and belief that he was numbered among the children of God by adoption."

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, born March 28, 1784, in Grantham, N. H. In 1804 he moved with his parents to Watertown, Jefferson County, New York, being among the first settlers of that county. In 1806, he returned to New Hampshire, and married Zina Baker, daughter of Dr. Oliver Baker, December 28, 1806. Soon after his marriage he moved to Watertown, N. Y., where he lived and prospered in temporal blessings until 1811, when he sold out, and the following year war was declared with Great Britain, which proved fatal to his prospects, and coupled with much sickness in the family reduced them very low in pecuniary circumstances. His services in the army were done with the fife. He was in one battle, that of Sackett's Harbour. In 1816, Providence smiled on him again, and about the same time he experienced religion and joined the Presbyterian church. In the winter of 1832–33 he first heard of "Mormonism," read the Book of Mormon, believed it with all his heart and preached it almost every day, to his neighbors and everybody he could see, or had the privilege to chat with, until 1835, when he and wife with two of their children were baptized by Elder ——— Dutcher. After that his house was a meeting house and a home for all Saints. May 18, 1836 he sent two of his children, Dimick and Presendia, and their families, to Kirtland, waiting himself only to sell out. October 1, 1836, he started and moved to Kirtland with quite a number of Saints under the direction of Apostles Orson Pratt and Luke S. Johnson, being ordained an Elder previous to starting. He arrived in Kirtland on the 11th, bought a farm from Jacob Bump, and paid him three thousand dollars. Of this amount he was defrauded, so that in a little over one year he was compelled to labor by the day for a living. In the breaking up of Kirtland the apostates harrassed him with law suits until he saw his children often go to bed crying for bread. For nearly two weeks he lived on greens. His house was a hiding place for Father Joseph Smith, Hyrum, Samuel and Don Carlos, while they were trying to escape from the persecutions in Kirtland. The Egyptian mummies were also hid in his house for a long time, and many of the pursued and persecuted Saints found a retreat there and a hiding place from apostates' persecution. In Kirtland he received his washings and anointings in the temple, and was ordained a High Priest and High Counselor, in which office he acted until the Church left Kirtland. He lost five hundred dollars in the Kirtland bank. May 21, 1838, he started for Far West, Mo., where he arrived about two months later, and, by counsel, moved to Adamondi-Ahman, where he was chosen commissary for the brethren who armed for defence; and after the mob had driven and hemmed in the scattering brethren, he was commissary for all the people of that place and had charge of all the provisions of the town. After the surrender of the Church in Far West, Missouri, he was foreman of the committee chosen to confer with the committee chosen by the mob. These two committees were representatives of and authorized to transact all business for their respective committees. He was also one of a committee chosen to see to the poor and get them moved out of the State of Missouri, which they did to the complete satisfaction of the whole Church, though with no ordinary exertion, and remained himself until about the last man and family. His was one of the first families that moved to Commerce (afterwards Nauvoo) where he arrived May 14, 1839. About the 1st of July his whole family was taken sick, and on the 8th his wife died of sickness, caused by hardships and exposure. At this time he suffered for the comforts of life. At a conference held in October, 1839, he was again chosen to the office of High Counselor. August 28, 1840, he married Lydia Partridge, relict of Bishop Edward Partridge, whose maiden name was Lydia Clisbee. As a member of the High Council he helped to lay one of the corner stones of the Nauvoo Temple. He continued a member of the High Council until the expulsion from Nauvoo. In the move from Nauvoo he was appointed captain of a company of fifty wagons which he helped to make, and to fit up for the company, but which was subsequently disorganized. He was then appointed a captain of ten in Amasa M. Lyman's company, until the settlement of Mt. Pisgah was located, where he was left to preside over that Stake of Zion. In this place his labors were extreme and unremitting for the good and welfare of the people, and the comfort of the sick, of which there were a great many. August 9, 1846, he was taken sick with the chills and fever, of which he died August 19, 1846. In life he was beloved by all the Saints. His love and zeal for the cause were unsurpassed by any. His judgment was respected and his conduct never questioned; he never had a trial or difficulty with any person in the Church.

The foregoing account of his life is extracted from the Latter Day Saints Biographical Encyclopedia.

DIMICK BAKER HUNTINGTON, born May 26, 1808, in Watertown, N. Y.; married in 1830, in Watertown, N. Y., Fanny Maria, daughter of Gen. Clark Allen, (descendant of Ethan Allen) and Martha (Thompson) Allen. She was born October 26, 1810, in Loraine, N. Y., and died December 14, 1894, in Pleasant Green, Utah. She accompanied her husband in the famous Mormon Battalion march through the deserts, enduring all the hardships of a soldier's life. She was for four months without tasting bread, before her daughter Betsy Presendia was born, living on roots. When the girl was born at Pueblo, on Mexican Territory, she had no mid-wife or doctor, so an Indian squaw attended her. He married a second wife, about 1853, in Salt Lake City, Ellen Sophia Jacobson. She was born in Norway, about 1826, and died in Parowan, Utah, about 1900.

He was Indian interpreter for the U. S. Government up to the time of his death, which occurred February 1, 1879, in Salt Lake City. He was a private in Co. D of the Mormon Battalion, and as such took part in the Mexican War in 1846. He enlisted July 16, 1846, and was discharged July 16, 1847. He was a member of the Salt Lake City Council in the early days. He was High Priest in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He was instrumental in helping to settle and colonize the whole region south of Salt Lake City, down to St. George on the South border of the Territory. He acted as interpreter for the Indians, as a soldier of the Mormon Battalion, and he Jacobs. He was born in 1817, in Niagara Falls, N. Y.; and died in Salt Lake City, Utah. She married, second, in April, 1841, in Nauvoo, Ill., Brigham Young. He was born June 1, 1801, at Whitingham, Vt., and was the son of John and Nabbie (Howe) Young. His career is well known, is a matter of history, and need not here be set forth. He died August 29, 1877, in Salt Lake City.

Mrs. Zina D. H. Young was a notable figure in Utah from the early pioneer days until her death.

Her efforts and work were of a manifold nature, and such as to advance the interests of the people and State. She did more than any other woman in Utah to establish sereculture as a local industry, and had personal charge of the large cocoonery established by President Young as a first venture in that line. In 1876 she was elected president of the local silk organization, and afterward traveled many times throughout Utah in its interests. In 1879 she visited the Sandwich Islands, and in the same year traveled over 1,000 miles in Utah by carriage conveyance, presiding over meetings. In 1881 she visited New York and Vermont and spoke in Sunday schools and temperance meetings throughout those States, attending also the Women's Congress at Buffalo, and the National Suffrage convention in New York. During this visit she assisted also in the organization of a branch of the Relief Society at Cohoes, New York. In the next year she was chosen president of the Deseret hospital and fulfilled its duties for twelve years. She was one of the band of Utah women who attended the Women's Congress at the World's Fair, and at the famous Sunday services held by the congress, was given a seat on the platform as representative among the fourteen women ministers of different denominations who conducted the meeting. At this time she also presided over a session of the Congress of Charities and Philanthropies, of which she was elected president. For more than thirty years she was connected prominently with Sunday school work, and as one of the earliest members of the Relief Society lent effective help in the work of that organization.

At the death of E. R. Snow, she was appointed to fill the former's place as president of the society. When in 1891 the local body became connected with the National Council of Women, Mrs. Young became vice-president of the great National organization. She died August 28, 1901.

HENRY GRAVES HUNTINGTON, born September 10, 1825; married, March 26, 1851, in Black River, N. Y., Harriet Jane, daughter of Osborne and Amanda Baker. She was born August 6, 1830. He was a farmer, and was a great musician on fife, flute and organ; was organist in church for over 20 years, and played in the Martial Band for many years. He was a Methodist and was Sunday School superintendent and class leader for 20 years. He was born in Huntingtonville, but about 1832, moved to Black River, N. Y., where he died March 18, 1910.

He was born at the little hamlet of Huntingtonville, just east of Watertown, on the river road leading toward Carthage, the place taking its name from the Huntington family, who first settled there and who at one time were a numerous and notable clan in this region. About the time he had grown to young manhood the general trainings and annual musters of the militia of the country were the chief events of interest in rural communities, and all through Northern New York the young men of military age met twice a year for drill. Each company tried to obtain the best drummers and fifers obtainable, as before the days of the brass band martial music was the only kind of military music obtainable.

His services were required for all trainings, political meetings and other gatherings. He was a member of the famous drum corps of old Company K of the Thirty-fifth Zouaves. He was an adept upon several other musical instruments as well as the fife.

For the last fifty-eight years of his life he lived on the Huntington farm near Black River. He was an old school Democrat and his first vote for President was cast for Lewis Cass of Michigan in 1848. He was a staunch supporter of Andrew Jackson and a bitter opponent of the Civil War and of the Lincoln policy.

SIMON HUNTINGTON, like his brother Christopher, spent his youth, probably, with his mother in Windsor. If the Norwich records are authority, he was born in England, in the year 1629, and of course was not far from four years of age when the family came to this country.

He seems to have possessed the spirit, and to have shared the fortunes of his brother Christopher. With him he appears at Saybrook, where, in October 1653, he married Sarah, daughter of John Clarke, of Saybrook, and later of Milford. In 1660 he joins the colonists who settled Norwich, and thenceforward stands among the first of that important settlement, both in church and state.

Here his house lot was also in a central and commanding position, and the records show him to have been a large land-holder, and in worldly matters, an enterprising man.

He was chosen, soon after the removal to Norwich, deacon of Mr. Fitch's church, in which office he served with acceptance, until, in consequence of his infirmities, he was succeeded by his son, in 1696.

In 1674, he, with that other veteran and tried pioneer, Thos. Leffingwell, represented Norwich in the general court, and he again was a member of the body in 1685.

In 1686 the town grant him and his sons thirty acres of pasture, westward of Goodman Sluman.

In 1690, and again in 1696, he was the townsman. In 1694 he was appointed a committee to treat with Mr. Jabez Fitch, with respect to his helping and succeeding his father in the work of the ministry. In the same year he was also on a committee to search out and report on the deficiencies in the records.

In 1697 he was one of the committee to seat the meeting house. In 1700 he was appointed on a commission to deed anew, lands about whose titles disputes had arisen, or would be likely to arise.

In 1703, April 27, he and his son Simon deed away thirty acres of pasture land, west of the great plains, to John Gifford.

The following record is copied from the Windham probate records.

To all Christian people to whom these presents may come: Know ye that I, Simon Huntington, sen., of Norwich, in the county of New London, in the colony of Connecticut, in New-England, have of my free will, given, granted, unto my son Joseph Huntington, of the same town, county and colony aforesaid, and do by these presents, give, grant, alienate and pass over my whole right, title, interest in and unto our thousand acre interest, or one allotment, in the new plantation, above Norwich, that was willed by Joshua, Sachem, son of Uncas. I, the aforesaid Simon Huntington, have freely and absolutely given, alienated and passed over unto the aforesaid Joseph Huntington, my whole allotment, situated and being in the southeast quarter of the aforesaid plantation above Norwich.

March 2, 1691. } Deed acknowledged Jan. 24, 1692.
} Before JAMES FITCH, Assistant.

Deacon Huntington died in Norwich, June 28, 1706, aged 87 years; and Sarah, his wife, died in Milford, in 1721, aged 88 years.

SARAH (HUNTINGTON) TRACY, born in Saybrook, Conn., in August, 1654; married November 23, 1676, in Norwich, Ct., Solomon, son of Lieut. Thomas Tracy. He was born in August, 1653; was a physician, and was the fourth of six sons, all of whom were active and leading men in the early history of the town. She was mentioned in the will of her uncle Jos. Clark, of Saybrook, made August 27, 1658, in Milford, and bequeathed five pounds. The will of her grandfather, John Clarke, on record in New Haven, says, "I give to my grandchild Sarah Huntington my little trunk with drawers on ye bottom."

She died in 1683, and her husband married, in 1686, Sarah (Bliss) widow of Thomas Sluman. He died in 1732.

SIMON HUNTINGTON, born in Saybrook, Conn., February 6, 1659, and taken by his parents to Norwich in the spring of the next year. Here he married October 8, 1683, Lydia, born August 8, 1663, daughter of John Gager, who in 1635 had gone from Charlestown, Mass., to Saybrook, and subsequently to New London, and thence in 1660 to Norwich. Her grandfather was that "right goodly man and skillful chyrurgeon," who had come to America in 1630 with Gov. Winthrop. And most worthy did she show herself to be of such an ancestry, falling behind them, neither in the depth of her piety, nor in her skill in ministering to all "aylements" both of the body and mind.

Like his cousin Christopher, Simon was destined to a most important service in the early history of the home chosen for him by his parents. Inheriting his father's piety and gifts, he was called by the church in 1696, to succeed him in the deaconship, and in this office he served with no less than the father's fidelity and acceptance, as long as he lived.

He was, also, engaged much upon the civil affairs of the town, serving in many of its most important offices with marked ability. His house, occupying a central position, was honored as the magazine for the defensive weapons of the town, and as late as 1720, a report made to the town, states that it contained a half barrel of powder, 31 pounds of bullets and 400 flints.

In 1682 it was voted in town meeting, to grant "to Simon Huntington, jun., to take up one hundred akers of land on the Shawtoket, not prejudicing the highways nor former grants."

He died November 2, 1736.

Lydia, his wife, lived with him fifty-three years, survived him nine months, and died August 8, 1737, aged 74 years.

ROGER HUNTINGTON, born February 1, 1784, in Norwich, Conn.; married, January 30, 1814, Ann, daughter of Benadam Denison. She was born in 1784, and died September 15, 1819. He married for a second wife, August 30, 1820, Amelia Matilda Lambert. He was engaged early in life in trade, and was a man of most unwearied industry, and a pattern for the nice method and accuracy with which he executed every trust. His moments, not employed in his business, were most actively devoted to reading and study. He rose to a high rank among the citizens of his native town, in all those qualities which secure public esteem and confidence.

He represented Norwich, and the Senatorial district to which it belonged, in the State Legislature, and was Speaker of the House of Representatives while in that branch.

He was Comptroller also of the State. He died at his residence in Bean Hill, Norwich, June 27, 1852. The general sentiment of the community, among which he had always lived, was well expressed in an obituary notice in one of the city papers. It says, "We are pained to record the unexpected death of our most respected friend and fellow citizen, the Hon. Roger Huntington, of Norwich Town. Mr. Huntington was no ordinary man; and his high character and superior talents justly entitled him to the confidence and trust reposed in him by his fellow citizens." His wife, Amelia Matilda, died at Norwich, Conn., May 27, 1883.

DWIGHT WILLIAMS HUNTINGTON, born August 9, 1851; married, April 9, 1890, in New York City, N. Y., Mary Josephine, daughter of Charles Edmund and Josephine (Marsh) Shade. She was born October 4, 1865, in New York City.

He graduated from Yale College in 1873. He studied law in Cincinnati, and was admitted to the bar in April, 1875, and practiced in that city, with some success, for many years. In the spring of 1881 he conducted the republican campaign in Cincinnati, as chairman of the city committee. In the autumn of the same year he was elected by a large majority to the Ohio House of Representatives. His term lasted two years, and on several occasions he presided over the deliberations of the House. In 1885 he was nominated by the republicans for prosecuting attorney of Hamilton County, but his opponent got the office.

He was always interested in field sports and natural history, and wrote and published some works on those subjects, illustrated by himself, and, by 1901, had made many landscapes and pictures of the shooting fields in water color. Ultimately he abandoned the practice of law to devote himself to art. He now lives in Yonkers, N. Y.

JOSHUA HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., December 30, 1698, and married, October 16, 1718, Hannah, daughter of Jabez and Hannah (Lathrop) Perkins. He was admitted to the church in Norwich, at the same time with his wife, in 1727. He seems to have been a very active business man. As stated in the sketch of James (1. 3. 10.) he was one of the most forward in commencing the new settlement at the Landing. He was allowed to take up "twenty-five square upon the water on the west side of Rocky Point, on the north side of Lieut. Lathrop's grant, if it be there to be had; not prejudicing the conveniency to be laid out by James Huntington and Daniel Tracy." He was highest on the list of subscribers to the bridge built in 1737, over the Shetucket to unite Norwich and Preston, an enterprise in which none but moneyed men in that day could engage. In his successful business career commenced that family distinction and wealth, which, at the opening of the Revolution, had placed his two surviving children at the head of the aristocracy, even of their own aristocratic town. He died August 26, 1745. His wife who was born in 1701, died, also, in 1745.

In a letter to his brother Jabez, his nephew Jedidiah, then a member of college in Cambridge, thus speaks of him: "When I reflect upon the pleasure and delight I took in his company and conversation, I cannot think of parting with him. My sorrow, alone, is not my only care, but, Sir, I am grieved for you, who have lost so loving a brother, as well as one so high in the esteem of all who were acquainted with him."

JABEZ HUNTINGTON, born August 7, 1719, in Norwich, Conn.; and graduated at Yale College, 1741. He married, first, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Tracy) Backus, January 20, 1741–2. She was born February 21, 1721, and died July 1, 1745; when he married, for his second wife, Hannah Williams, of Pomfret, July 10, 1746. She was born July 23, 1726, and died March 25, 1807. He was elected, in 1750, a member of the general assembly of his native state, and for many years represented his native town to the universal acceptance of his fellow citizens, presiding, often, over the deliberations of the lower house. Early after his graduation he entered into the West India trade, and, by an honorable and efficient business career, laid the foundations of one of the amplest fortunes of that age. At the commencement of our Revolution he was the owner of a large amount of shipping, which of course was very greatly endangered by the rupture with the mother land. But his patriotism prevailed over his commercial and pecuniary ambition. He cheerfully sacrificed his property and consecrated himself and his family to the cause of independence. He was one of the most active of the committee of safety during the war; and in the September session of the assembly for the year 1776, he was appointed one of the two major generals from Connecticut, for the militia of the state, David Wooster being the other; and on the death of Wooster, from a wound received in the skirmish with the British, retreating from Danbury, in April of the next year, he was appointed major general over the entire Connecticut militia.

His great exertions, made for his country's cause, during those trying years of our national history, together with the great pecuniary losses which, in such a struggle, were inevitable, were too much even for his strong mind and vigorous frame. As the pressure of the early excitement and indispensable action passed away, it was soon seen how greatly they had impaired his physical and mental powers. "On finding himself disabled from public service, he resigned all his offices, and spent the remainder of his life in retirement, at his seat in Norwich. He was seized with a fatal complaint, in February, 1779, and after a gradual decline of more than seven years, he died October 5, 1786."

Gen. Huntington was a man of religious principle, having united with the church in 1741. It was very justly said in the funeral sermon delivered over his remains, "That a great man is fallen in this Israel, need not be mentioned for the information of this assembly." It is also stated in a note appended to the sermon, "he sustained an amiable and worthy character in the domestic relations and private walks of life." One other passage from that sermon, deserves transcribing for this notice: "As the train of melancholy distress which brought him to his end, probably originated from his painful and unremitted exertions for his country, in the time of danger; his country, surely, will not withhold the tear of grateful sorrow, but pay deserved respect to his memory, and teach succeeding generations to revere his dust; and as they pass his urn, to say, 'there lies the man who devoted his all to the public good; who sacrificed his ease, his health, and eventually his life, to serve and save his country'."

JEDIDIAH HUNTINGTON, born August 4, 1743, in Norwich, Conn.; "was graduated at Harvard College in 1763, with distinguished honor. The social rank of his family is evinced by the order of his name on the college catalogue, it being the second on the list of his class, above that of Josiah Quincy. The Master's degree was also conferred on him by Yale College in 1770. After the close of his academic course, he engaged with his father in commercial pursuits, and, with the approach of the struggle for independence, became noted as a Son of Liberty, and an active captain of the militia. Promoted to the command of a regiment, he joined the army at Cambridge, April 26, 1775, just a week after the battle of Lexington. His regiment was part of the force detailed for occupying Dorchester heights; and, after the evacuation of Boston by the British, marched with the army to New York. He entertained the commander-in-chief, on the way, at Norwich. During the year 1776, he was at New York, Kingsbridge, Northcastle, Sidmun's bridge, and other posts. In April of that year, he helped repulse the British at Danbury, Conn., assailing the enemy's rear, and effecting a junction with his fellow townsman, Arnold. In March, 1777, Roger Sherman writes that Col. Huntington was recommended by Gen. Washington as a fit person for brigadier, but that Connecticut had more than her share. On May 12 of that year, he was promoted to that rank, as Mr. Sherman states, " at Gen. Washington's request." In July, he joined Gen. Putnam at Peekskill, with all the Continental troops which he could collect; whence, in September, he was ordered to join the main army near Philadelphia, where he remained at headquarters, at Worcester, Whippin, White Marsh, Gulph Hills, etc. In November, on the information of the enemy's movement upon Red Bank, he was detached with his brigade, among other troops, to its relief, but Cornwallis had anticipated them. Having shared the hardships of his companions in arms at Valley Forge, through the winter of 1777–8, he, together with Col. Wigglesworth, was, in March, appointed by the Commander in Chief, "to aid Gen. McDougall in inquiring into the loss of forts Montgomery and Clinton, in the State of New York; and into the conduct of the principal officers commanding those posts." In May, he was ordered with his brigade to the North River, and was stationed successively, at Camp Reading, Highlands, Neilson's Point, Springfield, Short-hills, Totowa, Peekskill, West Point, etc. In July, he was a member of the court martial which tried Gen. Charles Lee for misconduct in the battle of Monmouth; and in September he sat upon the court of inquiry to whom was referred the case of Major Andre. In December of 1780, his was the only Connecticut Brigade that remained in the service. On the 10th of May, 1783, at a meeting of officers, he was appointed one of a committee of four to draft a plan of organization, which resulted in their reporting, on the 13th, the Constitution of the Society of the Cincinnati. On the 24th of June, Washington writes that the army was "reduced to a competent garrison for West Point; Patterson, Huntington, and Greaton being the only brigadiers now left with it, besides the adjutant general." At the close of the war he received the brevet rank of major general. His greatness was rather intellectual and moral than physical, as there is in existence a memorandum of the weighing of several revolutionary officers at West Point, August 19, 1788; when Gen. Washington weighed 209 pounds, Gen. Lincoln, 224, Gen. Knox, 280, and Gen. Huntington, 132.

On retiring from the army he resumed business in his native town, and was successively chosen sheriff of the county, treasurer of the state, and delegate to the state convention which adopted the Constitution of the United States. In 1789, he was appointed by President Washington collector of the customs at New London, then the port of entry for eastern Connecticut and Connecticut river, which office he retained under four administrations, and resigned shortly before his death. He died in New London, September 25, 1818, where his remains were first interred, though subsequently transferred to the family tomb at Norwich,

At the age of twenty-three, he made a public profession of religion, and was for many years, an officer and pillar of the church of which he was a member. "His munificence, for its profusion, its uniformity, its long continuance, and for the discretion by which it was directed," was pronounced, "without an example, or a parallel, in his native state."

His first wife was Faith, daughter of Gov. Trumbull. She died at Dedham, Mass., in December of 1775, on her way to the camp. Two of her brothers, one of them the distinguished painter, were associated with her husband in the war, of which her father was one of the main supports. She left a son.

His second wife was Ann, daughter of Thomas Moore, who was born in New York, received his education at Westminster school, London, engaged in commercial pursuits in his native city, at the approach of the Revolution retired with his family to West Point, and, driven thence by violence, returned to the city, where he occupied a place in the custom house through the war. He died at the house of his daughter, in Norwich. Her brother was the late venerable Bishop Moore, of Virginia. Her uncle Stephen was the proprietor of the spot now occupied by our national military academy, which Gen. Hunting-

JABEZ HUNTINGTON, born September 17, 1767, in Lebanon, Conn. He graduated at Yale, 1784, having spent his boyhood and youth with his maternal grandfather, the elder Governor Trumbull, of Lebanon. He married, first, December 12, 1792, Mary, daughter of Peter Lanman. She died, September 29, 1809, aged 36. He married, for his second wife, October 21, 1810, Sarah, an elder sister of his first wife, who was born December 20, 1765, and died February 19, 1850. She was remarkable for her intelligent and cheerful piety, during the twenty years of blindness, through which she was called to pass. He was a man of very marked qualities. Quick in reaching a conclusion, he was as positive and persistent in adhering to it, and as earnest in maintaining it. He was eminently conscientious also, so that, if he found himself at fault, he would acknowledge it as readily as detected. He was at one time connected with the Episcopal church or society in Norwich; yet, at length, he united with the Congregational church, and of which he continued a useful member, and became an efficient deacon. He was induced to accept the office of major in the Connecticut regiment of the army raised by the elder Adams, but soon left the service. He was at one time president of the Norwich Bank, and treasurer of the Norwich Savings Society. He died in Norwich, August 16, 1848.

The memoir of this gifted and truly christian member of the family has been worthily compiled and written by her brother-in-law, the Rev. Dr. Edward Hooker. The memorial is a just tribute to her great excellence and usefulness; its careful study could but be grateful and profitable to every one who bears her name.

Doing good to others, would, I think, most exactly express her life-work from early childhood to its close. She early acquired a mastery over every form of self-seeking, that she might live for others. At the age of eighteen, with a consideration unusual with one of her years, she deliberately consecrated herself to the service of Christ. "I am anxious," her correspondence testifies, "to fill up life with usefulness, that God may be honored." In the sabbath school of her own church, among the poor and unfortunate in her own neighborhood, with the remnant of the neglected Mohegan Indians, for whose spiritual and temporal good she unweariedly toiled, in her sympathy and cheerful labors for the unfortunate Greeks during their struggles, and for the perishing heathen of a foreign land, she equally exhibited this leading aim of her life. And she was anxious that her kindred might possess the same spirit. She says of them all, "If the numerous Huntingtons are useful in their generation, it is of little consequence whether they are conspicuous."

In fulfillment of this most earnest desire of her heart she engaged, as early as the year 1827, in an effort to secure the secular and religious instruction of the Mohegan Indians—a small remnant of that tribe still left upon the West bank of the Thames, some five miles below Norwich. Here, with much praying and toil, she established a missionary school, both for the week-day and the sabbath; and with the aid of two such kindred spirits as Miss Breed of Norwich, and Miss Raymond of Montville, she accomplished a good work. The nature and method are best exhibited in her own words:

"Seated in my little missionary apartment, which serves for parlor, bedroom, kitchen, schoolroom, and chapel, I have composed myself to the sweet employment of answering your good and long letter. I have a school of eighteen or twenty, including four adults, one man, two married women, and a 'Squasisse.' They come at half-past nine and stay until four, having half an hour's intermission; and we carry on arithmetic, millinery, tailoring, &c., besides the ordinary avocations of a school. All these, with the government of untutored, untamed beings, nearly exhaust my powers, during the day; and at evening I have work to fit and my 'profession' to study. But I am quite satisfied. I came here for their benefit and not to please myself. Our sabbath school is nearly twice as large, embracing whites, and is kept up four hours of the sabbath, besides an intermission. I leave home Sunday morning and return the next Sunday evening, and Miss Raymond does the same, so we are both here on the Sabbath."

Nor were her labors here unrewarded. She persevered in enlisting her friends in the measure, until she had secured a chapel and an appropriation from Congress of five hundred dollars towards a house for a permanent teacher, and an annuity of four hundred for his support.

But more than this. She had won the confidence and affectionate regard of the neglected children for whom she labored. Well and truthfully did her early friend, Mrs. Sigourney, thus embalm in her sweet verse these labors.

Hear I the murmured echo of thy name,
From yon poor forest-race? 'Tis meet for them
To hoard thy memory, as a blessed star,
For thou didst seek their lowly homes, and tell
Their sad-browed children of a Savior's love.
And of that clime where no oppressor comes.
Cold winter found thee there, and summer's heat,
With zeal unblenching. Though, perchance, a sneer
Might curl some worldling's lip, 'twas not for thee
To note its language, or to scorn the soul
Of the neglected Indian, or to tread
Upon the ashes of his buried kings
As on a loathsome weed. Thy own fair halls
Lured thee in vain, until the hallowed church
Reared its light dome among them, and the voice
Of a devoted shepherd, day by day,
Called back these wanderers to the sheltering fold
Of a Redeemer's righteousness.

Nor less truthfully, or with less grace, did the Rt. Rev. Bishop Lee of Delaware, allude to these labors for the Indians, in the address which he delivered at the great bi-centennial celebration, in Norwich, in 1859. I quote from memory, yet am sure I report the spirit of the touching record. "With an angel's alacrity she entered on this work. Where strong men would have shrunk back, this fair and delicate woman never hesitated."

But another field of labor was prepared for her, when she was no longer needed here. Just two months after her marriage she embarked at Boston for Malta, on her way to Syria, the missionary field to which she had cheerfully consecrated the remainder of her days. The same prayerfulness, the same affectionate consideration toward her parents and friends, and the same intelligent preparation for her work, which had previously made her so useful and acceptable, were in this most important and trying decision no less apparent. On the 28th January 1834, she reached Beyrout, her future home. Here, for about two years and a half, she was permitted to enjoy the labors of the successful missionary. Early and late, each day, in season and out of season, wherever she might be, she was ever at the work which she loved. She came to feel each half hour sacred to some special and useful service. While in Beyrout, she was, at the same time, engaged in learning the language, in teaching a school, in aiding her husband in preparing manuscript for the press, and in superintending the needed domestic arrangements of her large household.

But she was not destined to a long service in this heathen land. Her health having given out, she left Beyrout in June, 1836, with her husband, to visit Smyrna. On the passage occurred an event which, while it illustrated the simplicity and strength of her faith, aggravated the symptoms of her disease. Off to the north of Cyprus their vessel struck upon a reef, and they were obliged to trust themselves to the long-boat, by which they were at length safely landed on the uninhabited coast of Asia Minor. From this sandy beach, they were next morning removed, by a lumber boat from Damietta, in Egypt, to the deserted harbor of Selefkeh. Here, for about five days, she was exposed to burning sun and the chill air of night alike, with scarcely the defenses of ordinary clothing, this having been much of it lost by the wreck. One sabbath and one birth-day she thus spent. Yet this dying woman found, even then, occasions for gratitude. She had, it is true, none of those comforts which had before blessed her natal days—the presence of her dear friends, and the bountiful tokens of their love; she had not even a sufficiency of food, or the comfort of a place for rest; but she had sources of joy which sustained her; even there, angels, no doubt ministered to her. That lone, and we should say, desolate sabbath, brought, as she herself testified, to her, "a feast of fat things.', From his pulpit of stones, the Rev. Mr. Wynne, who had also shared their fate in the shipwreck, read from the English liturgy. "Never," she said, "did I so realize the beauty of that formulary, and its value under such circumstances."

At length, on the sixth day after they had been wrecked, they were taken off; and on the 18th of July they were landed at Smyrna. But her disease had now assumed a positive form. It was rendered certain that her lungs were too much diseased to admit of her recovery; and the succeeding weeks only the more confirmed the fears of her husband, as they gradually carried her down toward her end. On the 7th of August she was removed to Boojah, a village some five miles from Smyrna. Here, in resignation and in Christian joy, she awaited her end. In communion with her Savior, in pleasant memories of dear friends in other lands, and in spirit-longings for the communion of sainted friends, who had already gone above, she had great delight; until she was called, herself, to all the glory and joy of a Christian's final triumph. She had finished her life-work; she had given up all she had clung to on earth; she had nobly resigned her earthly interest in her devoted and loved husband, and she was ready to go. Too weak to utter words for human ears, she spoke her last benediction in the sweet smile which lighted up her face, as with the radiance of her new home, in Heaven.

An appropriate monument marks the place of her interment, in a quiet spot in the village where she died, on which this record may be read:

"To benevolent efforts for the youth and the ignorant of her native city; for the neglected remnant of its aboriginal inhabitants, and for the benighted females of Syria, she devoted all her ardent, expansive, and untiring energies, as a servant of Christ, until, sinking under missionary labors at Beyrout, she was brought hither, and died in triumphant faith, September 30, 1836, aged 34."

6. PETER LANMAN, born September 16, 1809, and graduated at Yale College, in 1828. During his junior year he became the subject of revival which then occurred in college, and with all the earnestness of his ardent nature devoted himself to the life of a Christian, and to the work of preparation for the ministry. The memoir of his sister Sarah L., states, that "for the purpose of obtaining means to prosecute his professional studies, and also for the benefit to be derived to his own character, he went to Natchez, Miss., to engage in the labors of a private tutor in a family." But he was not to succeed in this leading aim of his heart. A fall which he had received before going South, had seriously affected his spine, and soon began to show its results upon his entire nervous system. He was forced to abandon his professional studies, and return home again, to linger awhile in great suffering, until death should come to his relief. He died, solaced with all the most precious ministries of his beloved home, and of his unwavering faith, December 24, 1832.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS LEWIS RICHARDS, born March 30, 1830, in Cincinnati, O. He received his early education at the Woodward high school and the E. S. Brooks private school in Cincinnati. In 1845 he entered Yale and was graduated in 1849 with the degree of A. B.

After leaving Yale he began the study of medicine at the Cincinnati Medical College, and continued his studies at Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, where he received the degree of M. D., in 1852.

In 1853 he married, at Sandy Hill, N. Y., Emma Weston. His wife died a year after the marriage, and shortly afterward he gave up his medical practice and entered the Theological Seminary of Virginia, where he was a student from 1855 to 1858. He was ordained deacon immediately after leaving the seminary in 1858, and a year later was ordained a priest of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He received the degree of D. D. from Griswold College.

Immediately after his ordination he was sent to St. James Church, Great Barrington, Mass., as rector, where he remained until 1861. At that time he was transferred to the Church of the Saviour at West Philadelphia and served there as rector until 1865. In 1865 he was placed in charge of Trinity Church, Columbus, O., and served there until 1869, when he came to Providence as rector of St. John's.

While rector of the Church of the Saviour in West Philadelphia in 1863 he married Mary White Wiltbank. She was born May 7, 1841.

"After an illness of short duration Rev. C. A. L. Richards, D. D., rector emeritus of St. John's Episcopal Church, died at his home, Providence, R. I., March 20, 1914, in the 84th year of his age.

While delicate health had forced him to retire from the rectorship of St. John's on Easter Monday, April 8, 1901, he had always taken an active interest in the Providence Public Library, of which he was a trustee, and up to last week he had attended regularly the meetings of the board of trustees of the library.

He took charge of St. John's on December 2, 1869, coming from Columbus, O. At that time the parish was small, but at the close of his thirty-one years of active work as rector, it had become one of the largest and most important Episcopal parishes in the city.

While he was rector the parish house was built, and it was at that time the largest in the city. Missions were established by him, and institutional additions made to the work of the parish.

As the work increased it became necessary for the first time in the history of the parish that an assistant rector be appointed, and in 1892 Rev. Joseph Hutcheson was chosen for the position. He was succeeded after six years of work by Rev. Henry Bradford Washburn. Rev. William Austin Smith succeeded Mr. Washburn and was assistant rector at the time of Dr. Richard's resignation.

When the vestry of the church accepted the resignation of Dr. Richards the title of Rector Emeritus was conferred upon him. Rev. Lester Bradner was appointed rector as his successor.

The rector emeritus after his retirement still entertained a deep interest in the welfare of the parish, and his advice was always sought in matters of importance concerning the conduct of its affairs. He was also deeply interested in the work of Rhode Island Hospital, of which he was for many years a trustee.

St. John's is one of the oldest parishes in the State, and it is recorded in an old document that, in 1722, the parish voted "to get a minister and live like Christians." A wooden structure was built that year. The present structure was built under the leadership of Dr. Crocker. The parish house was built in 1893.

In its early history the church was known as the King's Church and was founded directly through the influence of the Church of England's society for the propagation of the gospel in foreign parts."

JOSHUA HUNTINGTON, born January 31, 1786, in Norwich, Conn., and graduated at Yale in 1804. He married, in 1809, Susan, daughter of Rev. Achilles Mansfield, of Killingworth, Conn. He was remarkable, during his college course, for his correct and gentlemanly deportment. His classmate and chum during the sophomore year, Dr. McEwen, late of New London, speaks of him as a young man of "very acceptable address, both private and public," as having "constitutional discretion," and "good common sense." A revival of religion occurred in college during his sophomore year, of which he became a subject. He very soon decided to devote himself to the work of the ministry, and this henceforth was the aim, or business of his life. A habit of stammering had been contracted, which threatened to interfere with this purpose; and at length his embarrassment was such as almost effectually to discourage his attempts. But so firm was his conviction of his duty, and so earnest his desire to do good in the work on which he had set his heart, that he set himself to the daily task of reading, and re-reading with steadiness, long passages, until he completely triumphed. After his graduation, he commenced with several young men the study of theology under the guidance of Dr. Dwight; and after leaving New Haven, as was customary in those days, he sought the instruction and training which were to be found in the study and pastoral duties of the private pastor. Such a school he enjoyed in the family of Rev. Asahel Hooker, Goshen, Conn.; and here he laid a good foundation for the marked success which attended his brief but most useful ministry.

At the early age of twenty-one he commenced preaching, and from the first, though exceedingly youthful in appearance, both the manner and the matter of his discourses were such as to secure the approval of his hearers.

The memoir which appeared in the "Panoplist," for December, 1820, will exhibit the brief ministerial career and Christian character of Mr. Huntington, better than anything which can now be written. It is a tribute, penned by one who knew well, and who highly prized the subject of it. It is the worthy testimonial of a personal affection, which would forever embalm "those amiable and desirable qualities, on which the eye dwells with unmingled satisfaction."

The memoir says: "Few young men have been received with more decided marks of approbation on their first entering the pulpit; yet we never heard that it produced in him any indication of vanity. This we consider as a most remarkable triumph of good sense and piety over the love of distinction. During the year that Mr. Huntington preached as a candidate, the people in each of several vacant parishes were desirous of obtaining him for their minister. He received two formal invitations on the same day, one from the Old South church, Boston, and the other from the Congregational church in Middletown, Conn. About the same time he received an invitation from another church in a pleasant and populous town. The unanimity with which these calls were offered, by the most respectable congregations, in different parts of the country, is proof that the person to whom they were addressed was a youth of distinguished promise.

"After serious deliberation, and with the most judicious advice, he accepted the invitation from the Old South church, and was ordained as colleague pastor with the late Rev. Dr. Eckley, May 18, 1808.

"He had not quite completed the third year of his ministry, when the senior pastor was suddenly removed by death, and the weight of a large church and congregation rested upon him. Though deeply feeling his increased responsibility, he was not disheartened, but continued his faithful labors with alacrity and zeal. * * * * * * *

"In the steady, noiseless, conscientious discharge of his official functions, did this good man persevere, without any remarkable era in his life, till he was summoned to an early tomb. His progress was that of increasing usefulness, and extending reputation, and a most evident preparation for a better world."

His death occurred in Groton, Mass., at the residence of Rev. Dr. Chaplin, while he was returning homeward on a journey for his health, on Saturday, September 11, 1819.

His widow survived him but a little more than four years. She was born in Killingworth, Conn., January 27, 1791, and died in Boston, Thursday, December 4, 1823. The "Memoirs" of this gifted and beautiful woman was prepared by the Rev. Dr. B. B. Wisner, her pastor, and passed through several editions. It is a worthy memorial of a sainted and most lovely character, and occupies, as was predicted by the Rev. Dr. Gordon, of Edinburg, in his commendations of the work, for the first Edinburg edition, "a high place among works of Christian biography."

CHILDREN, BORN IN BOSTON.

1. SUSAN MANSFIELD, born September 10, 1810; married, first, Charles H. Strong, of New York City, who died. She married the second time, Wolcott Richards, M. D., of Cincinnati, Ohio. (See 1. 3. 3. 4. 1. 1. 3. 2.)
2. JOSEPH ECKLEY, born February 11, 1812, and graduated at Yale, in 1832, his name having, after his youngest brother's death, been changed to Joshua. He has pursued a professional course of study, both in medicine and theology. He graduated in medicine at Yale College, in 1837, and from 1838 to 1845 he was in the United States naval service as assistant surgeon. He was for several years engaged in teaching in a private school for boys in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y. From 1864 to 1876 he was a clerk in the U. S. Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. He was at first a member of St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington, but in his later years was a Roman Catholic. He died March 23, 1900.

   He spent much time during his leisure for several years in gathering material for a genealogical list of the Huntington family. The collection embraced about two thousand of the descendants of the two Huntingtons who were pioneers in the settlement of Norwich, and was of very great value in the construction of the genealogy of the family, published in 1863.

DANIEL HUNTINGTON, born October 17, 1788, in Norwich, Conn.; graduated at Yale in 1807, and studied theology. He married, first, July 21, 1812, Mary Hallam, daughter of Capt. Gurdon Saltonstall, and great granddaughter of the governor of that name. He was ordained in October of the same year, as the third minister of the Congregational church in North Bridgewater, Mass., in which office he continued until his health compelled him to abandon it in 1832. While there, his wife died in 1822. He married, for his second wife, October 28, 1823, Alma, daughter of Benjamin French, of Boston, who died June 3, 1837; after which he married, for his third wife, November 1, 1841, Sarah Sayr Rainey, of New London, who was living in 1863.

The Connecticut Historical Society's Library contains four sermons or addresses written by Mr. Huntington; and a poem on religion delivered before the United Brother's Society, of Providence, R. I.; and "The Triumphs of Faith," before the Porter Rhetorical Society of Andover. He also prepared a very acceptable memorial of his own daughter, Mary Hallam, which was published by the American Sunday School Union. He delivered also one of the addresses at the anniversary of the Pilgrim Society of Plymouth. He died in New London, May 21, 1858. The following extracts from the tribute to the worth of this good man, found in the Congregational Year Book for 1859, deserve a place in this family memorial:

"His first settlement in the ministry continued twenty years, and was attended from time to time with the demonstration of the spirit and with power, so that great numbers were added to the Lord. * * * After a temporary respite from pastoral labors, he gained sufficient strength to gratify his fine literary taste in the instruction of successive classes of young ladies in the higher branches of an educational course, while residing in New London, the city of his birth and death. In this employment, combined with occasional preaching, as returning health permitted, seven years passed away usefully and pleasantly. But his heart yearned for a return to the labors of his love at his first entrance on public life; and receiving an earnest call from a portion of his original church and congregation, to take charge of them in the Lord, he cheerfully consented to the arrangement, and was received not only by them, but by the original church, and by all the churches and pastors who had known his going out and coming in in former years, with open arms. After passing thirteen years in this section of his former field, winning souls to Christ and making glad the hearts of all by his tender love and faithfulness, he obtained permission to retire to the home of his youth, and pass the evening of his days amid the scenes of his earliest aspirations. The separation occasioned many tears and much anguish of spirit to all concerned, though rendered imperative by the providence of God.

"From that day, for about six years, till near the time of his departure, he continued to preach the gospel, 'in season and out of season' as the 'open door was set before him,' all the while 'setting his house in order.' At the moment when his master called him, he was 'diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord;' preaching his last sermon to the mission church in Mohegan, just four weeks before the messenger of death met him.

"The physical sufferings of his last days were very great, owing to the complicated disease which, with fierce strength, assailed the delicate frame; but his faith and patience failed not; no complaining or murmuring word fell from his lips; his mind was clear and unclouded to the last. * * * To the affectionate daughter who was trying to arrange the pillows for his aching head, he said: 'Let me go, for the day breaketh;' and to another, who asked if he would not lie down, he answered, 'Lay me down in Jesus' arms, other refuge have I none.' To a brother, according to the flesh, who said to him, 'I hope you can say with the Apostle, "I know in whom I have believed,"' he replied, after a moment's pause, 'I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him against that day.'"

WILLIAM SALTONSTALL HUNTINGTON, born September 25, 1828, in North Bridgewater, Mass.; married, May 24, 1854, in North Abington, Mass., Lucy Otis, daughter of Valentine and Jane (Churchill) Erskine. She was born October 26, 1833. Mr. Huntington was an accountant and bookkeeper, and lived in North Bridgewater, Campello, and South Abington, Mass., and New London, Conn.

He was a private in the war of the Rebellion, Co. I, 1st Mass. Vol. Cavalry, and Co. I, 4th Mass. Vol. Cavalry. He enlisted September 13, 1861, and was discharged September 24, 1864.

Early in 1861 Mr. Huntington, believing that every man at the North, able to bear arms, should be prepared to take the field at short notice, for the preservation of the Union, began to drill in military tactics the members of the civil organization to which he belonged. Later he recruited a full company, expecting to join a regiment of infantry then being raised in the State. Governor Andrews, not being ready at that time to accept this company, and the young men becoming impatient, Captain Huntington disbanded his company, and enlisted as a private in Co. I, 3rd Battalion, 1st Mass., Vol. Cavalry, many following his example by enlisting in various regiments. This battalion later was detached from the regiment by order of the War Department, and became the Independent Battalion, Mass. Cavalry Volunteers, and as

ANDREW HUNTINGTON, born June 21–2, 1745, in Norwich, Conn.; married, first, November 26, 1766, Lucy, daughter of Dr. Joseph and Lydia (Lathrop) Coit, of New London, who was born July 2, 1746, and died May 9, 1776. Of her, his brother Jedidiah, in a letter dated Camp at New York, May 21, 1776, thus speaks: "The death of our sister Lucy, has made one more breach in our late happy family, though it ought to check our grief, that she left such good evidences of her interest in a better world." He married for his second wife, May 1, 1777, Hannah Phelps, of Stonington, who was born December 16, 1760. He and his first wife united with the first Congregational church of Norwich in 1775, and eminently honored their Christian profession. His second wife, who lived until July 30, 1838, was a noble woman in all personal and social qualities. Mrs. Sigourney says of her, "she possessed an elegance of form and address, which would have been conspicuous at any foreign court. She was especially fascinating to the children who visited her, by her liberal presentations of cake and other pleasant eatables, or, what was to some equally alluring, a readiness to lend fine books with pictures."

Of Mr. Huntington the same authority says: "he was a man of plain manners and incorruptible integrity. His few words were always those of good sense and truth, and the weight of his influence given to the best interests of society." He was engaged in commercial pursuits, and in 1795 embarked in the manufacture of paper at the Falls in Norwich. He was Clerk of Probate Court from 1786 to 1789, and Judge of Probate from 1790 to 1816. During the War of the Revolution he was a commissary of brigade, and was untiring in his exertions to secure prompt supplies for the army. Upon his services, Gov. Trumbull put great reliance, and it is on record that such reliance was not misplaced. He died April 7, 1824.

OLIVER ELLSWORTH HUNTINGTON, born September 3, 1802, in Norwich, Conn.; married, June 10, 1830, in Norwich, Conn., Mary Ann, daughter of Joseph Strong. She was born in 1807, and died November 23, 1840. He married, second, April 12, 1854, in Deerfield, Mass., Eunice Kimberly, daughter of Henry and Betsy (Kimberly) Hitchcock. She was born August 19, 1825, and died March 16, 1910. He had no children by this marriage. He was a druggist and chemist, a graduate of Yale College, 1825. He lived in New York City, and moved to Cleveland, Ohio, where he died July 13, 1877.

Mrs. Eunice Huntington was a devoted member of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Cleveland, Ohio, and was actively engaged in its benevolent and missionary activities. But her energies were not given exclusively to work in her own church. She was one of the organizers of the Woman's Christian Association; was the first chairman of the Stillman Witt Boarding Home, a position she filled for over twenty-five years; was one of the Vice Presidents of the Association, and for a year and a half acting President, (refusing to take that office permanently). In each office she was always faithful and successful, serving with wisdom and good judgment.

Another demand upon her activities came to her almost at the inception of the organization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Cleveland Presbytery in 1873, when she became its President. For twenty-five years she served the Society in that capacity, conducting its affairs with conspicuous ability and wisdom.

She was a woman of rare refinement and courtesy, a sympathetic friend, and an earnest, prayerful disciple of Christ, growing in christian graces with advancing years.

He was corresponding secretary of the General Association of the Congregational churches of New Hampshire, and later of the General Conference of Maine. In Warner and Gorham he served upon the school committee for many years. After his retirement from the active ministry he devoted himself to historical work, and in 1914 completed a life of Samuel Huntington, (1. 3. 4. 2. 4.) signer of the Declaration of Independence, and President of Continental Congress. He and his wife reside at Milton, Mass.

3. ELLSWORTH, born September 16, 1876, in Galesburg, Ill. After graduating from Beloit College, Wis., in 1897, he began his explorations immediately. He went to Turkey and spent four years teaching in Euphrates College at Harput, in Armenia, on the Upper Euphrates River. During vacations he explored the surrounding country, especially some of the Kurdish regions which are almost independent of the Turkish government. He was arrested twice because the Turkish officials thought that any one who took notes so freely must be a spy, and at two other times was requested not to travel so much. Before leaving Turkey he succeeded, after several attempts, in floating through the canyons of the Upper Euphrates and down the rapids in company with W. H. Norton, U. S. Consul at Harput. The journey had been made only once before, by the German General von Moltke, in 1839. The natives claimed that the rapids had become more filled with boulders since von Moltke's time, and that no one could pass them. They refused to accompany Mr. Huntington and Mr. Norton, who made the most dangerous parts of the trip alone. In addition to making maps of the river and of various other regions, Mr. Huntington discovered and explored a number of Hittite and other ruins. In recognition of this work he was awarded the Gill Memorial by the Royal Geographical Society of London.

   On returning from Turkey he carried on graduate work for two years at Harvard, and then went with the well-known geographer Professor W. M. Davis, to Russian Turkestan, as a part of the Pumpelly Expedition of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. After the main party returned home, he traveled with the Khirghiz across the Tian Shen Mountains to Chinese Turkestan. Returning by way of the Alai Mountains he was joined by a Russian official, Yanchevetski, and the two made a journey to Seistan, at the corner where Afghanistan and Baluchistan join Persia. They traveled along the Perso-Afghan border in a most lawless region which is under the rule of neither the Persians nor the Afghans. They tried to enter Afghanistan at two or three points, but in each case were summarily put out by Afghan soldiers. After spending the winter in Persia, Mr. Huntington joined the second Pumpelly expedition and assisted in excavations at Anau and Merv on the borders of the Transcaspian desert.

After a stay of only four months in America, during which he wrote half of a volume entitled "Explorations in Turkestan," Mr. Huntington went to India in company with Mr. Robert L. Barrett, and crossed the Himalayas and the Karakorun plateau to Chinese Turkestan. He then spent a year alone in the deserts of Chinese Turkestan, exploring ancient ruins and studying the life of the people. During the winter he crossed an absolutely unexplored portion of the Lop desert, a vast plain of rock salt broken into blocks which stick up two or three feet. At a point 150 miles from the nearest village the camels strayed away in pursuit of wild camels. Only the energy of a native camelman in following the animals twenty-five miles by moonlight saved the party from almost certain destruction. From Chinese Turkestan the route back to civilization was through the depression of Turfan, which, although in the heart of Asia, lies below sea level, to the Siberian railroad at Omsk.

The results of this journey were embodied in a volume entitled "The Pulse of Asia," a work which was honored by medals from the Geographical Society of Paris, and the Harvard Travelers Club. After writing this volume, Mr. Huntington went to Yale University in 1907, as instructor in geography, a subject whose advanced phases were then new in universities.

In 1909, he again went to Asia, this time under the auspices of Yale University. He spent six months in traveling back and forth in Palestine and the Syrian desert, and in crossing the center of Asia Minor. This resulted in a book entitled "Palestine and its Transformation." Since then his travels have been confined to America. He has spent much time in investigating the ruins of the southwest, and in working out the history of the big trees of California, in relation to human history. He has also traveled in Yucatan and Gautemala, among the ruins of the ancient Mayas. This work has been described in numerous articles, especially in Harper's Magazine, and also in a book called "The Climatic Factor, as Illustrated in Arid America."

Although some of Mr. Huntington's work was done from sheer love of exploration, most of it was directed toward a definite aim. His purpose was in general to study the effect of geographic conditions upon the life and character of primitive people. Later he became specifically interested in the question of changes of climate during historic times. All his later journeys were planned in order to throw light on this. It was the investigation of ancient lakes which led him into the dangerous regions of Afghanistan and into the unexplored salt wastes of Lop. His work has given rise to a distinct theory of pulsatory changes of climate, and of their effect upon history. Evidence of this seems to be found not only among the ruins, rivers and lakes of Asia, but in the trees of California, and in the remarkable civilization which sprang up about 2,000 years ago in Central America. He has published "The Climatic Factor" and "The Solar Hypothesis of Climatic Changes." His most recent work, published in 1915, is entitled "Civilization and Climate."

He received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard in 1902, and that of Doctor of Philosophy from Yale in 1909. He belongs to the Congregational church, and is independent in politics.

JOSHUA HUNTINGTON, born August 16, 1751, in Norwich, Conn.; married, December 11, 1771, Hannah (1. 2. 4. 6. 12. see page 230) and commenced business with his father. But at the summons of the revolution, he threw himself with all the ardor of a young patriot into the cause of his country. The battle of Lexington aroused the martial spirit of the Norwich boys, and a hundred of them hastened, under command of Joshua, then lieutenant, to the scene of action and were annexed to Putnam's brigade. Under date of June 22, 1775, "Prospect Hill in Cambridge," he thus writes to his father: "I am now encamped on Prospect Hill, about one mile from Charlestown ferry. We have entrenched so strong that 'tis thought we shall be able to keep our ground. We have been fired at a number of times from the ships and floating batteries, but they were not able to reach us. Several men have been killed since Monday last, by guns going off accidentally, although the officers take all possible care to prevent it. We have two men in our company wounded in the battle, but not mortally. We lost none. I received your letters per Major Rodgers and brother Jed. Should have written you last week from Dedham, but came from there in the alarm on Saturday last as to the battle."

In another of his letters to his father, dated Cambridge, September 25, 1775, he having been suggested as captain of that company which he had, as lieutenant, led to the army, he throws himself upon the advice of his father, assuring him that he shall be "entirely satisfied with your doing as you think will be of the most advantage for the good of the army in giving your advice in the matter."

A letter of his to his father, dated Cambridge, November 22, 1775, shows how much he felt the claims of business and home upon him. "I have determined not to engage in the new army, as I am sensible my business calls me at home, and I know our business is such that I shall be of service to assist you. It is with much reluctance I shall leave the army, as I am offered as good a berth as I should expect. I can't say when I shall be at home, as the Connecticut troops are desired to stay the month of December, I am afraid our soldiers will not stay any longer than they first engaged for, so shall stay as long as our company will tarry and then return. As to news, we have nothing special at camp. We expect to entrench on Cobble Hill this night which, I expect, will distress our enemy."

That he did not leave the service, as both his business and his inclination would call him to do, is apparent from the following letters of still later date. That he was regarded as an officer of unusual merit at this early period of his connection with the army, is abundantly evident from contemporaneous records. I find this allusion to his popularity, in a family letter of his brother, Jedidiah, dated at Providence, June 18, 1775: "I do not know what credit brother Joshua is in camp, but I find at this place and all along the road, he has got himself much honor, from the good order and regularity of his company. He is much spoken of for his good behavior."

After the evacuation of Boston by the British, the company of which he had command went with Putnam's brigade to New York.

A letter from him, dated Camp near King's Bridge, September 20, 1776, shows his position at that period: "You have most likely heard of our retreat from the city, before this, but I will give you some of the particulars. Sunday morning last, our regiment, with a number of other regiments, were ordered to the lines a little below Turtle Bay, where lay five or six ships within musket shot of our lines. About six o'clock a most furious cannonade began from the ships. At the same time the enemy landed a large body of men a little above where our men were posted, and marched directly for the main road in order to cut off our retreat, which they had like to have effected, as the greatest part of our army were from six to fourteen miles distant from the city. In this skirmish we lost some men, though I think not many. I have been unwell about a fortnight, with a slow fever and the camp disorder, which prevented my being in the skirmish. I had not passed the road but a little while before the enemy came up; and if I had been with the regiment at the lines, I was so weak and feeble, I should, without doubt, have fallen into their hands. I have now left the regiment for a few days, and am with brother Chester, about sixteen miles from the city, getting better.

"The enemy made an attack last Monday on our people, 'tis said, with 2,500 men. Our men engaged them with spirit, and after an engagement of about an hour, the enemy retreated with great confusion. In the attack we lost fifteen or twenty men. As the enemy carried off the most of their dead, I cannot tell their loss. Our army are in very high spirits.

"I understand that our family are concerned in a privateer from New London. I told brother Andrew I should be glad to be concerned £100. Should be glad to know whether he has engaged any part for me or not. Brother Chester and Ebenezer are in usual health. I inclose you a letter for brother (Joel)?"

From another letter, dated North Castle, December 4, 1776, we still are able to follow his course, and to find him unwavering in it. "I received yours of November 17th, since which our army have been constantly on the move. As to their present situation, is impossible to give it to you. Brother Jed is stationed about fifty miles distant from me, in the Jerseys. Brother Chester and Ebenezer are at Peck Kilns, about thirty miles. They were all well a few days ago. There is a body of the enemy in the Jerseys, as far as Hackenback, the remainder, I believe, are on York Island. We have a flying report, that there is a fleet of the enemy lying at Frog's Point. If so, I think it likely they intend a visit to some part of New England. I hope the people will be spirited to oppose them, wherever they go. I wish to hear that our three month's men engage fast, as I am afraid our army will soon be very thin."

At a later period he was employed in securing shipping for the use of the war. In the fall of 1777 he had charge of the building of a frigate, at Gale's Ferry, for the service, and in July 8, 1779, he thus writes to Thomas Mumford, Groton. "I wish you to inform me if you know of a small privateer of eight or ten guns, to be sold at New London or elsewhere, as I want to purchase one of that size. If I should purchase I should be glad to have you concerned."

ELIZABETH (HUNTINGTON) WOLCOTT, born in Norwich, Conn., November 8, 1774; married, October 12, 1800, Hon. Frederick Wolcott, of Litchfield, who was born November 2, 1766, an honored member of an honored family. He was brother to the third Governor Wolcott of Connecticut, a son of the second, and grandson of the first governor of that name in the state, and a descendant of that noble man, the English Armiger, Henry Wolcott of Windsor, who succeeding a long line of titled ancestry in the mother land, came to establish in this a long line of nature's true nobility. The son of John Wolcott of Golden Manor, Tolland, England, has not yet wanted among his descendants worthy representatives of the spirit which the motto of the Wolcott Arms breathes and produces: "nullius addictus jurare in verbi magistri;" "accustomed to swear in the words of no master.

Mr. Wolcott was much in public life, having been several years a member of the state senate, and clerk both of the county and superior courts. He graduated from Yale College in 1786, and studied law, but ill-health prevented him from practicing. He was Judge of Probate for Litchfield County in 1796. He and his brother, Oliver, were engaged in the development of woolen textiles in Wolcottville, Conn. Mrs. Wolcott died April 2, 1812, at Litchfield, Conn. Mr. Wolcott married, second, June 21, 1815, Mrs. Sally Worthington Cooke, daughter of Rev. Samuel Goodrich, of Berlin, and had four children by her. He died in Litchfield, Conn., May 28, 1837.

EBENEZER HUNTINGTON, born December 26, 1754, in Norwich, Conn.; and graduated at Yale College in 1775, and, like his elder brothers, enlisted all his energies at once in the service of the Revolution. He married, first, December 10, 1791, Sarah Isham, of Colchester, who died in 1793. He married again, October 7, 1795, Lucretia Mary McClellan, who died November 5, 1819.

In the obituary notice which follows, notice is made of the refusal of the faculty of Yale College to grant him an honorable dismissal before the end of his senior year, to enable him to enter the army then about Boston. The following extract from a letter to his father, will explain the method by which he secured his diploma. Its date is, Roxbury Camp, September 25, 1775. "I should be glad if you would get me a certificate from president Daggett that I am in regular standing in college, and likewise a recommendation, as I imagine I can have a degree without going to Commencement for it; as Dr. Langdon has given me encouragement that he will give me one if the New Haven President refuses it—if I am denied it, only because of my tarry from college this summer, and my leaving it without liberty, in the alarm last April."

The following obituary notice is taken from the Norwich Courier of June 25, 1834.

"When the battle of Lexington was fought, he was a student at Yale College. Young, ardent and ambitious, he made application to be discharged from his duties there, declaring at the same time his intention of commencing a military life. The Faculty having refused his petition, he left New Haven and joined a company of volunteers to march to Boston. Soon after he was appointed first lieutenant in a regiment of Connecticut troops commanded by Col. Samuel Wyllis; and in June, 1776, he was promoted, receiving a captain's commission, and near the close of the campaign did the duties of brigade major under Gen. Parsons. Soon after this he was appointed deputy adjutant general to the troops stationed on the North River, under Maj. Gen. Heath, for the defense of the Highlands. He also received the appointment of deputy paymaster.

In 1777, Congress authorized Gen. Washington to raise sixteen regiments, in addition to those which were to be raised by the respective states. In one of these, commanded by Col. Samuel B. Webb, he received the commission of major; and in 1778, Col. Webb and the lieutenant colonel of the regiment having been made prisoners, the command devolved upon Major Huntington, who was ordered to march to Rhode Island to reinforce the troops which were directed to attack the British army then at Newport. Major Huntington continued in command till 1779, when, the lieutenant colonel, having been exchanged, resigned, and Major Huntington was promoted to a lieutenant colonelcy, to take rank from June, 1778.

Soon after this he joined the main army, when he was appointed to the command of a battalion of light troops to reinforce the army then acting against Cornwallis at Yorktown, where he continued until near the close of the siege, when he joined Gen. Lincoln as a volunteer aide, acting in that capacity during the rest of the siege, and up to the time of the surrender of Cornwallis and his army.

At the close of the war in 1783, he retired to private life, and in 1792, congress having appointed a system for the militia of the states, his excellency, Gov. Huntington, appointed him a general for the State of Connecticut, which situation he held under the successive governors, Wolcott, Trumbull, Treadwell, Griswold, Smith, and Wolcott, enjoying their entire confidence.

In 1799, in consequence of our relations with France, congress deemed it expedient to raise a body of troops for dicipline, in case of need, and having given the command to Washington, with a request on the part of the then president, John Adams, that he would designate such officers as he should consider best qualified for the service, Washington named Gen. Huntington, who received a commission as brigadier.

During the War of the Revolution, Gen. Huntington was considered one of the best disciplinarians of the army. He enjoyed the personal friendship of Knox, Humphries, Jackson, and Trumbull: and at its close, in private life, was deemed a gentleman of strict integrity of character, and was honored by the suffrages of the people with a seat both in the national and state legislatures.

Very few living men know anything of the embarrassments attending the officers who served in the war of the Revolution, much of which arose from the depreciated and finally worthless paper currency. The writer of this notice has heard Gen. Huntington say that he had given a month's pay for merely crossing a ferry.

Gen. Huntington was elected a member of the United States House of Representatives in 1810, and again in 1817. His death took place in Norwich, June 17, 1834.

ELIZABETH (HUNTINGTON) CHESTER, born February 9, 1757, in Norwich Town, Conn.; married November 25, 1773, Col. John, son of John and Sarah (Noyes) Chester, of Wethersfield, Conn.

He was a colonel in the Army of the Revolution, and especially distinguished himself in the battle of Bunker Hill. He was much in public life, and always in highest esteem, both for his signal public service, and for his great personal worth. In all the private relations of the man and friend, he was an example to be copied. As a Christian he was unaffectedly devout, an Israelite, indeed, in whom there was no guile. A compeer with the noblest of our Connecticut worthies of that day of noble names, he was also the humble and beneficent friend of the poor, and the readiest comforter of the sorrowing and afflicted, and in all his generous philanthropy, he found a ready helpmeet in his gifted and accomplished wife. He died November 4, 1809, and his widow July 1, 1834.

profession in Litchfield, where he continued about thirty years. He represented Litchfield in the state legislature in 1829; and during his residence in Litchfield he won for himself the confidence and esteem of the community, and the reputation of a sound and able lawyer. He was elected a representative to congress in 1829, and continued in that branch of congress until 1834. He married, May 22, 1833, Sally Ann (1. 3. 3. 4. 1. 2. 1. 9.) see page 478, and returned to his native town, which he made his permanent home during the interim of his public duties at Washington. He was appointed judge of the superior court in 1834, and also of the supreme court of errors. On the death of the Hon. Thaddeus Betts, a senator in the United States Congress, from Connecticut, in 1840, Judge Huntington was appointed for the remainder of the unexpired term; and at the close of it, in 1845, he was elected for another term; from which high trust he was removed, in the midst of his great labors, by his sudden death which occurred in Norwich, November 1, 1847. There were no children. His widow died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Strong, June 26, 1861.

The following tribute appeared in the American Obituary of 1847: "A statesman of more unbending integrity, or more unwavering fidelity to the interests of the Union, never occupied a seat in the senate of the United States; and the records of that body, during the last eight years, bear ample testimony to the untiring industry, energy, and distinguished ability with which he discharged the responsible duties assigned him by his native state."

4. SAMUEL, born July 3, 1731. His early boyhood was spent upon the farm, in the shop, and in such common schools as the parish of Scotland in that day could afford. At sixteen years of age, he was, as was customary then, apprenticed to a cooper living near his father, to learn his trade. Here he spent the most of the time until he was of age. But, though an industrious boy, he was also noted very early for his serious and thoughtful air, and yet more for his studious habits. Whatever books he could get possession of, he seemed determined to make his own; and the playtime of ordinary boys became the most busily employed moments of his youth. "His mind," says the historian of Norwich, in a very truthful sketch of his life which appears in her Norwich History, "was naturally acute and investigating, and his thirst for mental improvement so great as to surmount all obstacles."

When ready to commence business for himself, as cooper, he found himself with a well stored head and an excited and working brain. Though contrary to his father's wishes, he gradually extended his reading, and even took his regular hours daily, for studying by himself the Latin language, which, without a teacher, he learned to read with facility and profit; and, by the time he had entered on his twenty-second year, he had deliberately laid hold of the legal profession as the calling into which he had grown. With few books, and those mainly borrowed, yet with a zeal and perseverance which no discouragement could repress, he urged his way to the bar, and before his thirtieth year had ended, he was not simply an established lawyer, but one who had already won distinction. As early as his twenty-eighth year, he had been drawn from his native town to Norwich, as a better field for his professional career. He found among the fair maidens of his native town, the daughter of his pastor, Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, one who for her comely looks and serious and intelligent ways had early won his regard, and moved his affections. She, too, inherited the same spirit which from his Puritan ancestors had descended upon himself. Her grandfather had taken for his wife, a daughter of that Edward Taylor who had been expatriated from Coventry, England, because, after the restoration of Charles he was found too good a man to endure so insufferable corruption; and her father drew his spirit and blood from the purest and most heroic of even Huguenot veins; so that Martha Devotion was fitted by birth and by training, to join her fortunes with that of the now aspiring civilian. Their marriage took place April 17, 1761.

Few marriages have brought together two more congenial spirits. Each was the other's helpmeet. Blessed with no children of their own, they were the more a care and joy to each other. Their home was felt to be a home to all who had the good fortune to enjoy its hospitalities. Nor did their cheerful fireside long or often want the joyous gladness, which a well filled quiver of happy children gives. Two of the gifted children of his brother, Joseph, knew no other home. They found this all ready for them. They were early in it, as if born to it; and to the last, they showed an affection and dutifulness towards their parents by adoption, which would do honor to any child, if witnessed towards his own parents. Their home was also the resort of a large circle of relatives and friends, made welcome with a cheer as bountiful as it was spontaneous. The following picture drawn by the pen of the historian of Norwich, is too truthful and too full of the very soul of that early day, to be omitted here.

"After the war, he built a new house and lived in quiet dignity. A lively and happy circle of young people used frequently to assemble in this house, as visitors to the Governor's adopted children, or attracted by the beautiful Betsey Devotion, Mrs. Huntington's niece, and the belle of Windham, who spent much of her time here. After the social chat and merry game of the parlor had taken their turn, they would frequently repair to the kitchen, and dance away till the oak floor shone under their feet, and the pewter quivered upon the dressers. These pastimes, however, had little in them of the nature of a ball; there were no expensive dresses, no collations, no late hours. They seldom lasted beyond nine o'clock. According to the good old custom of Norwich, the ring of the bell at that hour broke up all meetings, dispersed all parties, put an end to all discussions, and sent all visitors quietly to their homes and their beds.

Mrs. Huntington was an affable but very plain lady. It is still remembered, that in a white short-gown and stuff petticoat, and clean muslin apron, with a nicely starched cap on her head, she would take her knitting and go out by two o'clock in the afternoon, to take tea unceremoniously with some respectable neighbor, the butcher's or blacksmith's wife perhaps. But this was in earlier days, before Mr. Huntington was President of Congress or Governor of Connecticut."

But there was a still higher charm which adorned and hallowed that home; and one which is much nearer the secret of that great eminence to which it was so soon destined. Religion had set her holy seal upon its united head. Born of pious parents and descended from ancestors marked for their faith, they both had early yielded to the redeeming grace. Both had enrolled themselves among God's people—the husband before going to Norwich, and the wife soon after; and both were charactized by a piety, as unpretending as it was sincere, and as uniform as it was deep and fervent. For nothing was Mr. Huntington more marked through his entire public life than for his conscientious discharge of religious duties. In his family, in the prayer meeting, in the public services of the sanctuary, he was always found at his post and always ready for whatever duty the hour called him to perform. Old men who have died in our times, have recalled the fervor of his prayers and the unction of his exhortations in the social meetings; and the testimony of all who knew him, is uniform as to the steadfastness of his Christian principle, and the purity of his Christian character.

But, it is rather as a public man, and civilian, that he is best known in history. The public life of Mr. Huntington commenced in 1764, when he represented Norwich in the general assembly. It was certainly fortunate that such a man should have commenced his public service, at just such a crisis. The famous and odious stamp act had just been designed and laid before parliament; and the assembly, of which he was for the first time a member, would be called to meet the responsibility of yielding to the oppressive measure, or of opposing and resisting it. Grenville, now become prime minister, was urging forward the measure to its enactment, and men of clear heads and stout hearts were needed to confront him. Among these, Mr. Huntington soon became prominent. Both in the assembly and among his townsmen at home, he exposed the oppressive nature of the act, and gave his ready voice and vote against a recognition of its authority. When the town clerk of Norwich, his kinsman, Benjamin, (1.2.4.3.11.) called a town meeting, April 7, 1765, to learn if the citizens wished him to use the stamps to be furnished by the Crown, he was present to urge, what the meeting unanimously voted: "that the clerk shall proceed in his office as usual, and the town will save him harmless from all damage that he may sustain thereby."

The cause which he now espoused, and the governmental principles which he now advocated, were his pole-star throughout his life. He was henceforth to be with the people, against all oppressive and unconstitutional acts of their rulers, even to the bitter but unavoidable end of revolution. The creed which was so soon to be immortalized in the declaration of a nation's independence, was already the most vital mainspring of his public acts. Yet, though opposed, with all his heart, to the stamp act, he was still a most loyal subject of the crown. He advised all moderation until better counsels should prevail in parliament, as he firmly believed would soon be the case. He was appointed, in 1765, the very year when the stamp act was to go into operation, the king's attorney for his state, and was of course expected to see that no disrespect should be shown the crown. This office he held until other official duties obliged him to resign it. In 1773, he was nominated a member of the council, or upper house of the Connecticut assembly, and took his seat in 1775. In 1774 he was appointed associate judge of the superior court of Connecticut. In October 1775, the general assembly of which he was now a member, appointed him, with such men as Roger Sherman, Oliver Wolcott, Titus Hosmer and William Williams, a delegate to congress, in which body he took his seat on the sixteenth of January 1776. Of this body he was a member until 1780; and it is due to the history of those years, the most eventful in our national existence, to say that no member of those busy congresses was more marked for his diligent and laborious working, or for his unselfish patriotism, or for his wise statesmanship than Mr. Huntington. None were consulted oftener or with more confidence than he; and none were readier to suggest or wiser to plan. The year in which he took his seat, finds him on many of the most important committees, such as were equally creditable to his head and his heart. With Jefferson and Livingston, we find him on the committee of Indian affairs; with Paine and Wilson and Lee and Morris, on that upon the manufacture of arms; with Wythe and Rutledge and Paine, on that on the capture and condemnation of prisoners; with the committee of one from each colony on supplies of ammunition; and on several committees raised to consider special cases of appeal, as that of Christopher Leffingwell, on the cargo of the brig Nancy; that of Henry Keppele, on sentence; and that of Hewes, a defrauded prisoner.

In March of this same year we find him appointed, also, a member of the marine court, constituted for the control of our navy. Nor was he less conspicuous on the memorable Fourth of July of this memorable year. Four Connecticut names, of which his was not the least, are autographed on that Declaration of Independence, which was to witness to all coming generations, equally, the patriotism and the treason of its signers: "names," in the prophetic language of our historian, "that will be household words in every family in the state, as long as the principles of 1776 shall survive in the hearts of the people."

How true to this hazardous declaration of his principles, Mr. Huntington subsequently proved; how intelligently and fearlessly he met all the responsibilities involved in it; how, step by step, he showed himself more and more indispensable to its efficient maintenance; how he won for himself, from the leaders of that day, the place and honor of leadership over even themselves, is abundantly attested by their vote of September 28, 1779, in which he is chosen their PRESIDENT, with a unanimity as honorable to them as to him. Nor did he fail in this trying office, an office which called for the highest qualities both of the jurist and statesman. From the date of his election, until his resignation, July 6, 1781, he was most incessantly and acceptably engaged in the engrossing cares of his office. Perhaps no one of those honored men who were called to that eminent post during the formative period of our government, occupied it with more credit than he. Certainly never did congress show sincerer reluctance than when, from utter exhaustion of his strength, he was forced to ask either for a temporary, or a final retirement from the office. For two months they delayed seeking for a successor, hoping that meanwhile he might so far recover as to justify his continuance. But such had been the tax upon his strength that he was compelled to insist upon his resignation, about a month before the close of his second year. The resignation was accepted, and a hearty vote of thanks testified to the confidence which congress reposed in him as the chief executive of the nation, and their gratitude for his impartial and able administration.

On retiring from the oppressive duties of his presidential career, he resumed, in August, his judicial post in the superior court of his native state, and also his seat in the council of the state.

In May of the next year, he was again elected to congress, but his health did not permit him to occupy his seat. Such service as he was able to render his country he still continued to perform in his official positions at home. Yet such was the impression among his fellow-citizens of the need of his counsel and statesmanship in congress, that he was again appointed in 1783; and in July of that year we find him once more a member of that body. In this office we find him unwearied and faithful as before, until his strength giving out, he was obliged to take his final leave of the national council, which he formally did on the fourth of November, 1783. No plea from his native state, which he had now so signally honored, could induce him again to accept a nomination for a post for which he felt he had not the requisite strength. He now retired to his beloved home, in Norwich, but not to the rest of private life. In 1784 he was appointed chief justice of the superior court of Connecticut. In 1785 he was chosen lieutenant-governor of the state; and the following year he was elected to succeed governor Griswold, as the chief magistrate. This office he continued to fill, being annually re-elected, until his death.

As the chief justice of his state, he showed the same ability which had marked him in other official stations. Indeed, this seemed pre-eminently the place for which he was fitted. His studies had made him familiar with the history and science of jurisprudence. He had the patience needed for the complete mastery of whatever evidence or analysis was essential to the case. He was remarkable for his urbanity, his impartiality, and his inexorable demand for what was true and right. The following testimony on this point, from the Biography of the Signers to the Declaration of Independence, is fully authorized by all we have been able to gather regarding his judicial course. "Having at all times a perfect command over his passions, he presided on the bench with great ability and impartiality. No judge in Connecticut was more dignified in his deportment, more courteous and polite to the gentlemen of the bar, or more respected by the parties interested in the proceedings of the court. His name and his virtues are frequently mentioned by those who remember him in his judicial capacity, with respect and veneration."

As governor of his native state, he was exceeded in the confidence he inspired and in the esteem he won, by none of those great men who, at different times, have made that office illustrious. Perhaps the elder Trumbull, the right hand man of Washington in the most perilous days of our revolutionary period, exceeded him in popularity. But to stand second to such a man in popular admiration, and his peer in the popular confidence, is enough for the lasting fame of any man. Such, doubtless, was the true position of Mr. Huntington among the Connecticut governors.

The following testimonials to his personal characteristics will complete our too meager sketch of this truly eminent and estimable man. The same authority just quoted, says: "In his person, Mr. Huntington was of the common stature, his complexion dark, and his eye bright and penetrating; his manners were somewhat formal, and he possessed a peculiar faculty of repressing impertinence, and keeping aloof from the criticising observations of the multitude. Without inflicting upon others the consciousness of inferiority, he never descended from the dignity of his station. * * * Being a man of great simplicity and plainness of manners, he was averse to all pageantry and parade, and strictly economical in his expenditures. He maintained that it was a public duty to exhibit such an example as might, so far as his individual efforts could avail, counteract the spirit of extravagance which had begun to appear. His principal aim in his domestic arrangements was comfort and convenience without splendor; although not hostile to good living, he was simple, sparing and temperate in his diet. His conversation, studiously avoiding frivolous topics, was eminently instructive, and he delivered his sentiments in few, but weighty words. He inherited from nature a large share of that delicacy and sense of propriety which distinguish the man of honor and refinement. * * * It may be truly said that no man ever possessed greater mildness or equanimity than Mr. Huntington. A living witness can attest, that during a long residence of twenty-four years in his family, he never, in a single instance, exhibited the slightest symptoms of anger, nor spoke one word calculated to wound the feelings of another, or to injure an absent person."

Miss Caulkins, in her Norwich history, concludes her sketch of this eminent and good man, with this testimonial to his piety. "Mr. Huntington was always a constant attendant on public worship, and for many years a professor of religion. In conference meetings he usually took a part, and on the Sabbath, if no minister chanced to be present, he occasionally led the services, and his prayers and exhortations were always solemn and acceptable. During his last sickness, he was supported and animated by an unwavering faith in Christ, and a joyful hope of eternal life. This sketch cannot be better concluded, than with the earnest wish breathed by a contemporary panegyrist: 'May Connecticut never want a man of equal worth to preside in her councils, guard her interests, and diffuse prosperity through her towns.'"

Though never a member of college he was honored equally by Yale and Dartmouth, from each of which he received, in 1787, the degree of LL.D. He received the same degree from Princeton in 1780.

The disease of which Mr. Huntington died, was dropsy of the chest, and his death occurred January 5, 1796. His estimable wife had died nineteen months before, June 4, 1794, aged fifty-six years.

JONATHAN HUNTINGTON, born June 17, 1733, in Windham, Conn. Without a collegiate education he became both a physician and a preacher, and in both professions maintained an honorable rank. He married in Lebanon, October 26, 1757, Sarah, (1. 3. 6. 8.) who proved a true helpmeet for him, both in his care for the souls and the bodies of men. He was ordained and installed as the first pastor of the church in Worthington, Mass., June 26, 1771, where he continued to officiate acceptably to the close of his life, March 11, 1781. His wife died May 13, 1793. He was a man of warm sympathies. He saw suffering only to pity and relieve it. He early became interested in the condition and labored for the improvement of the colored race in this country. He was one of the three pastors who encouraged the celebrated Lemuel Haynes to fit for the ministry, and cheerfully testified to the gifts and fitness of that wonderful man.

Simon Huntington, born in Windham, Conn., April 15, 1762. He married Priscilla Benjamin, in Worthington, and resided in Hinsdale, Mass., where he was a substantial farmer, and a useful and honored citizen. He was called to represent his town in the state legislature. His wife was born July 17, 1761, and died January 24, 1846. He died August 31, 1836. The following tribute to his memory from his grandson, Rev. A. Huntington Clapp, of Providence, R. I., is too true and good to be lost. He says of him: "He was of manly proportions, considerably above the medium size, and with a blended dignity and grace that marked him as one of Nature's noblemen. A dignified, but not formal politeness was natural to him, and never forsook him, even in the most ordinary intercourse of life. And yet those clear bright eyes, which beamed so gently from under the long, overhanging brows that veiled them, could flash fiery indignation, when he heard of a mean, dishonest, irreligious act or speech.

"Though a man of strong convictions—his opinions intelligently formed were firmly held—he was eminently a gentle man. Kindness was the law of his nature. It was by this, if at all, that he brought others to agree with him; and I have been told that in matters affecting important interests of the neighborhood, or town, his sentiments, however unpopular at first, were pretty sure, in the end, to prevail. No wonder he built up such a reputation as a peacemaker, and that so many referred their disagreements to his arbitrament, rather than to that of the law, and with so much more satisfactory results.

"But it was as a Christian, that he most honored himself in life, and is most clearly remembered by his survivors. He was an intelligent believer; knowing not only what he believed, but why he believed it. Firm in his own conscientious convictions, he was liberal to those who honestly differed, acting on the motto: 'In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity.' He was an earnest, practical Christian, living the religion he professed, so that even unbelievers were constrained to say, that if there were such a thing as vital piety, it would produce such a character and life as his.

"Young as I was, the religious services at his family altar, made impressions on my mind which could hardly have been effaced, even had they not been deepened by my last visit to him shortly before his death.

"There was something truly patriarchal in his mien, as he gathered his family around him morning and evening and on the Sabbath, read and expounded to them the Bible, and led them in prayer; his manner that of the assured Christian, yet with no tinge of irreverent familiarity. Every child felt that his prayer was true heart communion with God, that the exercise was one the old man loved, and that it shed a blessing over the household through all the day. Next to the Bible, he seemed to prize many of Watts' versions of the Psalms. I shall never forget the manifest satisfaction he took, during my last visit, in singing, many times a day, that version of the 119th Psalm, commencing,

'Behold thy waiting servant, Lord,
Devoted to thy fear,
Remember and confirm thy word,
For all my hopes are there.'

"I have no doubt that it was on his lips within a few moments of the time when he stepped from the door of his earthly home, and fell to the ground to find the portals of his heavenly mansion suddenly unfolded before him. What words could more fitly prelude the good man's exchange of earth for Heaven?"

RALPH HUNTINGTON, born November 23, 1784, in Worthington, Mass.; married, November 20, 1809, Judith Cooper, daughter of Perez and Lucy (Rand) Bradford. She was descended from the oldest son of Gov. William Bradford of Mayflower memory, and was possessed of great excellencies of person and of mind, but fell a victim to a pulmonary complaint at the early age of twenty-one years. She died in Boston, November 8, 1812. Mr. Huntington enjoyed in youth only the ordinary advantages of the sons of our farmers of that period, in the common schools. He fitted himself by such facilities, aided by the help of the village pastor, for teaching, and commenced his business career, alternating between the school-room in the winter, and the labors of the farm in the summer, equally industrious and successful in both. With the aid of his pastor's instruction, he pursued the higher branches of an English education, and at the age of twenty-one he was prepared to take charge of an academy in Hatfield, from which post he was called to a similar charge in Northampton, where he remained about two years. He now accepted a position as clerk in the Northampton Bank, and here, too, the same diligence which had before been characteristic of him was shown; employing his time out of bank hours, in copying for the probate office, and register of deeds. In 1808, one of the directors of the bank sent him to Boston to transact for him some business, and after its successful execution and a brief interim of travel, he opened, in the fall of that year, an exchange office on State street, Boston, in which business he soon took his place among the first of the Boston exchangers and bankers. Relinquishing this business to his younger brother Benjamin, he entered on commercial life, establishing a house in connection with his brother Samuel, in St. Domingo, W. I., where for twenty years they prosecuted a large and lucrative trade. On the death of his brother he closed up his business in St. Domingo, and returned to Boston, where he spent several years in connection with insurance companies, banks and other business corporations. As one of the original projectors and proprietors of the splendid Western Avenue connecting Brookline so closely with Boston, he deserves the grateful remembrance of both communities. He was president of the Boston and Roxbury Mill Corporation, and an extensive stockholder and director in the Boston Water Power Co., in 1863.

CHILD.

1. JULIA, born December 3, 1810, at Boston, Mass; married, April 14, 1836, in Boston, John Warren James, a lawyer of eminence, both in his profession and in politics. She was a woman of great excellence of character, and showed talent in occasional contributions to the poetry of the day. Mr. James died in Boston, February 7, 1861. He was a man who had been considerably in public life. His talents were of a high order; and he had diligently and successfully improved them. His biographer speaks of him as "a moving encyclopœdia, for he seemed to know the contents of every volume on the shelves of the Boston Athenæum." The main features of his character and life are sketched among the Hundred Boston Orators, by Loring.

He commenced life as a lawyer, having pursued his legal studies with his kinsman, Judge Samuel Gray Huntington of Troy, N. Y. He opened an office first in Port Gibson, and soon in New Orleans, La., where he at once entered upon a career of marked popularity. He was possessed of many qualities which ensure success in that profession. His reputation rapidly extended and he already held in promise a civic career, answerable to his native ambition, now excited by the stimulus of almost unbounded success. Suddenly a new turn is given to his impulsive course. The great South American Liberator, Bolivar, met him in one of his visits to New Orleans, and found it no difficult task to influence his youthful ambition with an ardent desire to share in the perils and glory of his own ambitious career. Quitting his business he eagerly engaged in the service of the chieftain. His heart, his hand, his means, were all consecrated to the cause; and but for the sudden loss of his health amid the excitements and diseases of this new life in a climate so enervating to one whose youth was fed on the bracing airs of a Berkshire home, his career would doubtless have run to its end parallel with that of Bolivar himself. Retiring from this adventurous field he entered into business with his brother Ralph, in St. Domingo, where to the end of his life he devoted himself with all his remaining vigor to its successful prosecution. His death occurred on a passage to the United States for his health, June 11, 1831.

BENJAMIN HUNTINGTON, born June 1, 1789, in Worthington, Mass.; married Caroline, daughter of Peter Dolliver of Boston, who survived her husband many years, and died in New York, December 13, 1852. He commenced life in Boston as a broker, and continued in this business until his death, in June, 1832. His personal form and bearing were such as befits the military character, and he was easily introduced into the military corps, and attained the rank of colonel. An incident occurred during the visit of Lafayette to Boston, in 1824, which greatly pleased the colonel, as a tribute to the family of which he was justly proud. At one of the public occasions on which the citizens were introduced to Lafayette, as the name of Benjamin Huntington was announced, and the bearer presented, the illustrious and grateful Frenchman paused a moment to inquire if he was a relative of his old friend, Samuel Huntington, President of the Continental Congress. When the colonel answered in the affirmative, Lafayette again grasped his hand, and with much emotion exclaimed: "Young man, you have noble blood in your veins, see that you never dishonor it."

1. AMELIA DOLLIVER, born July 29, 1820, in Boston, Mass., where she died February 12, 1879, unmarried.
2. CHARLES SANDERS, born November 4, 1821, in Boston, Mass. He was early devoted to the sea; and his whole career was filled with testimonials to the unselfish, exuberant generosity of his heart. In his first voyage from Salem, Mass., to Sumatra, visiting several Eastern ports and returning, from October, 1835, to January, 1838, commencing as light hand before the mast, and closing it as clerk, he won the esteem and confidence of the captain and officers of the ship, "for his fidelity and zeal in perfecting himself in his profession." In a second voyage in the same vessel, the captain leaving his post at Genoa, he was made first super-cargo, and with the mate completed the voyage. The third voyage he commenced, in 1841, as master of the ship, and returned in April, 1842, having spent six and a half years upon the water, with only some ten weeks at home. During his next voyage an incident occurred, which both tested his seamanship and proved him to be a humane and generous man. After crossing the equator off the coast of South America, he fell in with a Portuguese vessel, which had been disabled, and which was in a sinking condition. At great peril, both to himself personally, and to his crew, he rescued fourteen of the Portuguese, and carried them into Rio de Janeiro. This voyage was succeeded by seven others, in the "Borneo," and all of them successful, "without any accident whatever." In October, 1848, he sailed in the ship "Augustine Hurd," for Australia and Van Dieman's Land, and returned in 1850. He was about starting on another voyage, when he was taken with a sickness which ended, prematurely, his useful and promising life, April 16, 1850, in Salem, Mass.

Addison, Vt., July 29, 1804, Sarah, eldest daughter of James and Eunice (Collins) Hickox, of Watertown, Conn., who was born April 23, 1783. He went to Vergennes, Vt., in 1801, and to St. Albans, Vt., in 1836, where he died February 28, 1856. Yet he lived not in vain. He was called to the deaconship in the Congregational church of St. Albans in 1811, and for a quarter of a century served faithfully and well the cause of religion. "He was a good and a faithful man," and his children, who follow him in a like profession of the same faith, unite in calling him blessed.

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born July 18, 1814, in Vergennes, Vt.; married, first, October 1, 1839, in Bangor, N. Y., Eliza Hannah Walker, who died in 1879, in Burlington, Vt. He married, as his second wife, August 18, 1880, Mrs. Anna (Gibbs) Wells, a widow. She was born May 15, 1835, in Westport, N. Y., and died in Burlington, Vt.

He went to Burlington in 1830, and from that time until 1837 was employed in the book store and printing office of Chauncey Goodrich. He then began business on his own account, by opening a stationery and book store with bindery attached. He continued in this business until 1891, when he retired.

The confidence reposed in him by his fellow townsmen was emphatically shown when in December, 1854, he was elected constable and collector of taxes, to succeed a man in whose accounts a bad shortage had been discovered. This responsible post he retained by repeated re-elections, until 1865, the date of the incorporation of the city. Under a special act of the Legislature in 1857, authorizing the town to appoint a chief engineer of the fire department with unusual powers, he was the first selected for the difficult position, and continued to discharge its duties till January, 1861. During the years 1865–67 he was in charge of the city post office.

In 1867, he was elected alderman for three years from the north ward (there were but three wards then) and in April 1874, he again sat in the same board for the second ward, but resigned at the expiration of one year. During the years 1879–81, he served on the board of school commissioners. From the foundation of the Fletcher Free Library in 1873 till his death he was one of its trustees, and acted as treasurer. In 1876 he was selected to represent Chittenden county in the State Senate for the two years ensuing.

For some twelve years from 1856—or till its business ceased to be conducted by a corporation—he was a director in the Commercial bank, and a director also in the Vermont Life Insurance Company from its organization in 1868.

All who knew Mr. Huntington placed implicit confidence in him. He was a good counsellor, a man to lean upon. Every good project had his support, and that often of a substantial sort. His word was as his bond, it did not need witness, or seal, or signature. On all moral and religious questions his stand was taken; and as he believed, so he acted. From the time he connected himself with the Methodist church in 1846, he showed himself an active and aggressive Christian. He was broad-minded, too—as ready to join hands with his brethren in other communions as in his own. He filled at various times the offices of class leader, steward, superintendent of the Sunday School, and lay delegate to the general conference. His catholicity was shown, for example, by his hearty co-operation for many years in the work of the Adams Mission; and his fidelity to his personal convictions by the fact that, regardless of the odium which the act might bring on him, he signed probably ten times as many search warrants in the interest of the prohibitory law as any other citizen of Burlington. Of the strength and fervor of his Christian faith, no one who came into close contact with him can have any doubt. He died in Burlington, July 12, 1899.

In his boyhood his father's family moved to St. Albans, where he learned the watchmaker's trade. Always eager for education, he at length made his way to Andover, where he spent three years at the academy, supporting himself by means of his trade. Thence he entered Harvard with the class of 1852, still working his way. He continued to live in Cambridge until 1900, when he removed to Newton, Mass.

Mr. Huntington was widely known in his line of work, in which he was very skilful, achieving success in difficult cases where others failed. He had considerable literary ability, and was the author of numerous articles, both in prose and in verse, which were printed for private distribution but never published.

In 1893 on account of failing health, he retired from business in Harvard square, where he had been a familiar figure for forty years. He died in Newton, Mass., May 19, 1901.

JOSEPH HUNTINGTON, born May 5, 1735, in Windham, Conn. He graduated at Yale in 1762. His father had destined him to be a clothier, and kept him at this trade through his minority, much against his own wishes. But, moved like his brother, Samuel, by a passionate love of books, and like him, though not to the same remarkable degree, gifted with unusual inquisitiveness and capacity for mastering whatever study he attempted, and moreover, encouraged by the kindly aids furnished by his pastor, Mr. Devotion, he even at that late period commenced and completed successfully his preparation for college. He entered in his twenty-third year, 1758, and graduated honorably with the class. Within a year of his graduation, June 29, 1763, he was installed as pastor of the first church in Coventry, where he continued to labor in word and doctrine through his life.

Like his brother Samuel, he too had found in his pastor's family, the helpmeet he needed, and his marriage with Hannah, daughter of Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, was solemnized in 1764. She became the mother of his first three children and died September 25, 1771, aged twenty-six years. He married, for his second wife, Elizabeth Hale of Glastonbury, Conn., who died in 1806, aged fifty-eight years.

Dr. Sprague, in his Annals of the American Pulpit, has given a most accurate estimate of his ministerial work in Coventry, from which I am happy to quote. He says that "his ministry commenced under some most unfavorable auspices. Though there had been two settled pastors there, and one of them, Mr. Meacham, had had a ministry of considerable length, yet the parish had become greatly reduced, the meeting house had been suffered to go to decay, and every thing else was in a state of corresponding depression. The services at his ordination were held in the open air; but whether this was because the meeting house was too small to accommodate the assemblage, or too much dilapidated to be safe or decent, does not appear. Immediately after he was settled, he began to urge upon the people with great zeal the project of building a new meeting house. They responded with unexpected cordiality and harmony to this proposal; and in a short time, they had the best house of public worship in the whole region, built at an expense of five thousand dollars. Mr. Huntington was exceedingly gratified by the success of this enterprise, and often recurred to it with pleasure in the later years of his ministry.

From the period of his settlement, the prosperity of his parish, at least in regard to temporal interests, began to revive; and they continued a united people during his whole ministry. The state of religion, however, was scarcely ever otherwise than depressed; but the same remark is equally applicable, with few exceptions, to the church at large. The period of his ministry embraced the old French war, the war that gave us our independence, and the French Revolution; and each of these events was fruitful of influences most adverse to a healthful and vigorous state of religion in this country.

After the death of the first Dr. Wheelock, President of Dartmouth college, Mr. Huntington was spoken of as the person most likely to succeed to the office; and communications were made to him on the subject, that gave him reason to expect that he would be elected. The result was different from what many had anticipated; but the college testified its respect for him, about the same time, (1780,) by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was, also, the same year, elected a member of the board of overseers of the college, and held the place till 1788.

In the spring of 1792, Dr. Huntington was invited to settle at Huntington, Long Island; and he actually made a journey thither before he declined the invitation. The fact that he should have even hesitated on the subject was an occasion of considerable disquietude in his own parish, and seems to have loosened, in some degree, the cord that bound him to his people.

Dr. Huntington continued his labors till near the close of life, though infirmities had, for some time, been increasing upon him, and his health was supposed to have suffered from repeated and severe domestic bereavements. His death, which seemed to be the result of a complication of diseases, took place on the 25th of December, 1794."

No portrait of Dr. Huntington, it is believed, is now in existence. But tradition has taken delight in representing him as a man of more than ordinary personal attractions. His finely proportioned form, his graceful movement, his genial spirit, beaming out from every feature and springing to greet and embrace all whom it could bless; his ready wit, ever keenest when most needed, and never at fault when wit had work to do; his immense stores of various fact and incident; and his marvelous felicity in anecdote; all contributed to make him, what all who knew him have agreed in styling him, a man of rare social gifts, a most agreeable companion, and a very dear friend.

Dr. Abbot of Peterborough, N. H., who succeeded Dr. Huntington in Coventry, and who had, therefore, a good opportunity of forming his opinion, in his letter to Dr. Sprague, bears this testimony to his personal appearance and character.

"Dr. Huntington was a man of fine personal appearance, and of popular, engaging manners. His intellectual endowments also were much above mediocrity. His perception was quick, his memory retentive, his wit ready, exuberant, and agreeable. He was much respected and beloved by his parishioners and friends, and exerted very considerable influence in the community at large. Dr. Huntington was undoubtedly one of the most popular preachers of the day. He spoke extemporaneously, seldom writing more than a skeleton of the principal topics of a discourse. During the greater part of his life, his reputation was very high; but as his health and strength of body and mind failed, his reputation seemed proportionably to decline. I remember hearing Dr. Backus of Somers, express the opinion at a meeting of ministers not long after Dr. Huntington's death, that he possessed superior talents; and that in the meridian of his life, the public estimate of him was fully up to his actual merits, but that, in his later days, it had fallen below it. He was not a laborious student. He had very few books, and depended chiefly on borrowing; but having an excellent memory, he retained a large part of what he read.

"He was favored with a good constitution, firm health, and a high flow of spirits, for many years; and as one of his parishioners remarked to me would easily ride over all difficulties."

The reputation of Dr. Huntington since his death, has suffered from two causes—the extemporaneous manner of his preaching, and the posthumous work for which he will always be censured by those who deprecate its belief. He wrote so little, that he left no enduring memorial of his power as a preacher and orator. Scarcely a half dozen sermons or addresses of his, were ever written out and given to the press. And his printed sermons are probably less interesting and eloquent than the same when preached; the process of writing them, to which he was so little accustomed, really divesting them of their most striking excellences.

But the work which has wrought most unfavorably upon Dr. Huntington's reputation among orthodox Christians since his death, is that famous posthumous production of his pen—Calvinism Improved. The mystery which overhangs this work has never been removed. When it was written, or with what aim, has never been shown. The work itself is a very distinct and able statement and defense of the doctrine of universal salvation.

I have heard old men who accepted the doctrines of the work, say that Dr. Huntington preached good Universalism for twenty years, but in such a way that he was not suspected, except by those who relished it. The letter of Mr. Waldo, above quoted, gives us this statement; "I remember to have heard

Dr. Hart, with whom he was in intimate relations, say that, in a conversation with him, Dr. Huntington raised objections against the doctrine of future punishment, professedly to see how he would answer them; and the same thing I was informed occurred in conversations with several others of his clerical brethren.

The letter of Dr. Abbot, quoted above, has this additional fact; "Some time before his death, he wrote a Dialogue on Universal Salvation, and sent it to a brother minister, who resided at some distance, requesting his remarks upon it."

Dr. Sprague himself testifies that after the work was published to the astonishment of everybody, "some of his," (Dr. Huntington's) "brethren recollected to have heard remarks from him, which, in the review, seemed of a dubious character."

It seems very clear, that for years the author had been persuaded of the incorrectness of the orthodox belief on this subject, and that he had been elaborating this exposition and defense as a justification of the position he would be called upon to take. That he would have given publicity to the work himself, had not a series of domestic bereavements and physical infirmities impaired his mental vigor, and prematurely brought him to his grave, the nice sense of honor which he uniformly showed, and the habitual freedom and independence of expression in which he indulged, are sufficient proofs.

The preface contains, also, his own explanation regarding his delay to publish the work. After stating that the work contained "a small part of a system of divinity, which the author has been meditating more than twenty years;" and also, that, "the author is quite beyond a doubt, in his own mind, with regard to the solid truth of his leading principles and arguments," he adds this explanation: "With respect to the due time of advancing this step forward, and so explicitly pouring in this additional light, he is not so positive. * * * I am in the same predicament, with regard to the due time of publication, that all men since the days of inspiration have been. Any author may misjudge, after his greatest possible exercise of judgment in the matter. Some have done it, as the great and learned Huss, who was one century before the due time, in attempting to pour in a flood of light upon the world. He offered nothing to the public but what was advanced in the next century by Luther and Calvin, and others, with glorious success." But the work itself, when published about a year after his death, was doomed to a very "limited circulation,—much the greater part of the edition having been consigned to the flames by one of his daughters." So effectual was the suppression of the work, that it is now almost impossible to find a copy.

The following are believed to be the only other published writings of Dr. Huntington. I copy the list from Dr. Sprague's work, having been unable to make any additions to it. A sermon on the vanity and mischief of presuming on things beyond our measure, delivered at Norwich, 1774; a plea before the ecclesiastical council at Stockbridge, in the case of Mrs. Fisk, excommunicated for marrying a profane man, 1779; an address to his Anabaptist brethren, 1783; an election sermon, 1784; a sermon at the instalment of the Rev. John Ellis, 1785, at Rehoboth, Mass.; a discourse at the interment of Capt. John Howard, of Hampton, 1789; thoughts on the atonement of Christ, 1791; and a sermon on the death of Mrs. Strong, 1793.

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born October 4, 1765, in Coventry, Conn. On the Norwich records his marriage entry calls him Samuel, 3d. He was educated by his uncle Samuel (1. 3. 4. 2. 4.), graduated at Yale, 1785, and married, December 20, 1791, Hannah (1. 3. 3. 4. 1. 2. 2.). He was admitted to the bar while in Norwich, and continued with his uncle until his decease, after which, in May, 1801, he removed to Cleveland, and in 1805 to Painesville, Ohio.

Here he was immediately introduced into public life, to which the remainder of his days were devoted. Gov. St. Clair appointed him lieutenant colonel of the first regiment of militia of Trumbull County. In October, 1802, the delegates of Trumbull county elected him as one of their two delegates to the convention to be held in Chilicothe on the first of the following month, to form a state constitution. By the first assembly of the state, of which he was a senator from Trumbull county, he was appointed in 1803 one of the three judges of supreme court, and in December, 1804, he was appointed chief judge by the legislature, which office he held until he was elected governor of the state in 1808. In this office he served one term, two years.

He was one of the original proprietors of Fairport, and aided in its founding in 1812. During the war of 1812–14, he was paymaster in the northwest army. He was tendered the office of receiver of public moneys at Steubenville, by President Jefferson, and also that of judge in the territory of Michigan, both of which he declined. He died, June 8, 1817, and his widow November 29, 1818.

He attended Franklin College in Franklin, Ind., but did not graduate, and spent his entire life on the old homestead where he was born. He died October 4, 1882. He was a member of the Methodist Church, but preferred the Presbyterian. His son, Joel B., says of him:

"He labored more to give his children the heritage of an education, and the memory of a parent whose rectitude was an example to be followed, and cherished far more than great riches. Although of modest means no limit was placed upon his charity, no suffering human being was ever turned from his door, hungry, cold, or naked, and so unostentatious were his charities managed, that even the family looked upon them without comment at the time, and accounted them as commonplace matters of everyday life; and it is only in later years that I have fully appreciated the tact and Christian generosity, that marked the management of his charities, which made them appear of small moment even to his own family. Such was my father, and my heart swells with a just pride as I sketch this crude memorandum of matters that would require volumes to detail. All the attributes of true Christian manhood were incorporated in his daily life, and it is thus, simply as he lived, I would have his virtues recorded. Vices there were none."

JOEL B. HUNTINGTON, born November 27, 1867, near Boggstown, Ind.; married, in February, 1887, in Indianapolis, Ind., Lillie May, daughter of Charles Hatfield and Elizabeth (Wilson) Myers. She was born January 1, 1862, in Greenwood, Ind. He is a lawyer and a farmer, and lived in Indianapolis from 1888 to 1892, in Whiteland, from 1892 to 1897, in Greenwood, Ind., from 1897 to 1907, and is now residing in Scottsburg, Ind. He was Trustee for the Town of Greenwood, Ind., from 1900 to 1904, and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney from 1903 to 1907. They are Seventh Day Adventists.

Mr. Huntington has no middle name except the letter B. In his boyhood days his father's and uncle's families had four J. Huntingtons. He says: "When mail was addressed to J. Huntington the result was confusion, not to say embarassment, at times. To avoid this confusion I adopted the "B," to distinguish myself from the other J's, since which time I am addressed oftener as J. B. than Joel. As the letter in the past has rendered me faithful, honest, and honorable service, I shall continue to maintain it in its, and my declining years, trusting that I may never fall into any temptation that will bring it into disrepute or dishonor.

ELISHA MILLS HUNTINGTON, born March 27, 1806, and married, November 3, 1841, Susan Mary Rudd, daughter of Dr. Christopher Rudd, of Springfield, Ky. She was born January 8, 1820, and died December 3, 1853. Her father's family were from Maryland, and were Catholics. Her mother was Nancy, daughter of Henry Palmer, of Charlestown, S. C. She was, on her father's side, related to Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, and through her mother's mother, who was a Caldwell, she was related to John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina.

Mr. Huntington early devoted himself to the study of law, and was admitted to the bar at the early age of twenty-one. He had commenced preparing for college while living with his uncle, Elisha Mills, of Canandaigua, N. Y.; but on the removal of his uncle, he entered, at the age of fourteen, the law office of the Hon. Mark H. Sibley, where, for a year, he won the confidence of his employer by his fidelity to the duties of the office, and for his persevering diligence out of office hours. In 1822, he went, with his elder brother, Nathaniel, to Indiana, where he spent four years in varied exercise and travel, and reading, until he was admitted to the bar. He was soon appointed first prosecuting attorney, by the legislature. He then served four years in the legislature, when he was appointed president judge of his district, and held the office for four years. He was next appointed commissioner of the general land at Washington, D. C.; and subsequently, in 1842, he was nominated by President Tyler, and appointed United States district judge for Indiana. This office he held until his death, and its duties, in the words of the Hon. O. H. Smith, in his history of Early Indiana, he "has discharged to the entire satisfaction of the bar."

In 1858 he removed from Cannellton, Ind., to Terre Haute, to spend the remainder of his life. A pulmonary disease soon obliged him to seek relief in another clime. He visited St. Paul, Minnesota, and thence went to Cuba, but finding the climate of Havana too enervating, he returned immediately, much weakened by the voyage. He felt that his days were fast numbering, and he only wished, as he expressed himself in failing breath, to reach home, and "die among my people and friends in Illinois, the people whom I love."

Staying a short time at his pleasant home, he yearned for the pure and bracing air of the Upper Minnesota, and taking his two daughters, he again sought temporary relief in St. Paul. But his disease had made too deep inroads upon his strength to be arrested or helped, and he died there on Sunday, October 26, 1862. His remains were taken, as he wished them to be, by his nephew, John H. Rea, of Indianapolis, to Terre Haute for interment.

ENOCH HUNTINGTON, born December 15, 1739, in Windham, Conn., and graduated at Yale, 1759. He fitted for the ministry, and was ordained and installed over the first church of Middletown, January 6, 1762, where he spent his life. He was considered, during his collegiate course, a youth of remarkable talents, and his classical and general scholarship subsequently justified fully the decision. He was the Berkelyan scholar of his class. In the pulpit he was deservedly popular; his personal appearance, his easy and graceful manners, and his musical and well modulated voice, in the earlier part of his professional course, all contributing to such a result. He married in Windham, Conn., July 17, 1764, Mary, daughter of Samuel Gray, who was born October 14, 1744, and died December 15, 1803. He was the teacher, for some months, of the gifted Dr. Dwight, who always remembered him with affection and respect. On the death of President Stiles, of Yale College, in 1795, Mr. Huntington was prominent as a candidate to succeed him, but his failing voice and health obliged him to decline the honor, and his pupil, Dr. Dwight, was chosen. Mr. Huntington entered warmly into politics during our revolutionary period, taking sides with his brothers against England. Several of his sermons and addresses of that day, were printed, and have been preserved. They indicate the elements of a character scarcely inferior to that of his brother Samuel. I quote from a sermon preached on the occasion of a special fast, July 20, 1775, as illustrative, both of the spirit of the man, and the peculiar trials to which the patriots of that day were exposed: "To please the administration, and be what those who are seeking our hurt affect to style friends of government, neither our reason or religion, our voices or hands, must ever be used, but in perfect conformity to the pernicious, popish doctrines of implicit faith and passive obedience, and non-resistance. Any thing may be said, or written, or done in their favor and praise,—and pensions and promotion shall be the reward of their sycophants and tools; while anything to the contrary, however supported by reason and the Christian religion, is misrepresented, falsified and punished, by every means in their power. Those ministers who exert themselves to support every tyrannical and arbitrary measure, are caressed as friends of government; while clergymen of different principles and conduct, of whatever church they be, who converse upon and preach up as occasion requires, the duties, the privileges and the liberty of the gospel; but who dare not attempt to press the religion taught by the Prince of Peace into the service of tyranny and oppression, are called fanatical courting preachers, incendiaries, independents, enemies of government and order, and are marked out as objects deserving severest chastisement."

But no quotations from his sermons and addresses would do justice to the learning and scholarship, or to the nervous eloquence of Mr. Huntington. Nor did he, indeed, ever do full justice to himself. A nervous weakness afflicted him almost from the beginning of his public life. His voice early failed, and so he was unable to achieve, in his later years, the full promise of an early maturity. His sermons, for years, were whispered from the pulpit, yet so great was his popularity that his people would not consent to his dismissal.

Mr. Huntington was a Fellow of Yale College from 1780 to 1808. From the weakness mentioned above, he suffered more and more until his death, which occurred in Middletown, June 12, 1809.

LYDIA (HUNTINGTON) NORTH, born February 28, 1771, in Middletown, Conn., and baptized on the following sabbath. She married, in 1813, Col. Simeon North, who was born in Berlin, Conn., July 13, 1765, and died in Middletown, Conn., August 25, 1852. He was the father, by a former marriage, of the Rev. Simeon North, D. D., President of Hamilton College, and was extensively engaged in manufacturing arms for the United States, during and subsequent to our last war with England, and was also successful in introducing important improvements into the processes of the manufacture. On removing to Middletown he purchased the Huntington place, the parsonage, which had so long been occupied by Enoch (1. 3. 4. 2. 8.). The following tribute to her memory, is the testimony of her step-son, Dr. North: "Being the oldest of her unmarried sisters, at the time of her mother's death, it became necessary for her to take charge of her father's domestic establishment, and to occupy thus a highly important position, both in relation to the family, and the parish with which her father was connected. In these relations she fulfilled her duties in a most successful and exemplary manner. During the latter years of her father's life she spent much time in traveling with him, and thus became intimately acquainted with many of the most prominent ministerial families of the state. To a vigorous mind, and one quick in its perceptions, she added the culture of a good early education, and that refinement which is the natural result of long continued intercourse with refined and cultivated society. Her disposition was mild and winning; her manners dignified and graceful; her character and life, those of the true woman in the highest and best sense in the word; and I may add, she was a true exemplification of that religion of the New Testament, which she professed. Her death occurred September 7, 1840. My recollections of her are those of mingled love and reverence, for though not my own mother, she yet, with singular fidelity, performed for me the offices of a maternal guardian, when I most needed such a guardianship. I am sure that I owe to her influence much of what I have had occasion most to value in the experience of my subsequent life."

SAMUEL GRAY HUNTINGTON, born May 21, 1782, in Middletown, Conn.; graduated at Yale, in 1800, taking the Berkeley premium, and entered the legal profession. He married for his first wife, Mary Johnston, of Middletown. He married for his second wife, June 23, 1825, Mrs. Janette C. Cheever, who died November 14, 1856. He died, after an illness of a few days, in Troy, July 5, 1854. The following notice from the Troy Daily Whig, is ample testimonial to his ability and great worth.

"At a meeting of the Rensselaer county bar, held the day after his death, among the resolutions passed were the two following:

"Resolved, That the bar of this city, by the death of the Hon. Samuel G. Huntington, have lost their oldest member — a lawyer and a scholar; a man thoroughly bred to his profession, and ever ready to impart to others the knowledge which his careful training, advanced age, and varied experience had given him.

"Resolved, That the extent and variety of his classical and legal learning may well awaken the emulation of us, his survivors, who are thus suddenly called on to mourn his unexpected death.

"Hon. D. L. Seymour, in seconding the resolutions, spoke as follows: 'We are again assembled to take appropriate notice of the death of one of our members. The oldest member of the Rensselaer bar has fallen. Although past three score years and ten, yet such had been the vigor and animation of his declining years, that his sudden demise affected us almost as if he had been struck down in the full strength of manhood. We feel deeply, by this sudden providence, the feeble tenure by which we hold all sublunary things. But, beside these considerations, which will be more appropriately enforced from the sacred desk, we, as brethren of the legal profession, feel that the bar of our county has sustained a loss, and that we individually mourn the death of a friend. The occasion seems, therefore, to demand something more than ordinary note of its occurrence.

"'Samuel Gray Huntington was the son of Rev. Enoch Huntington, and like most of the youth of his native state, received the rudiments of a thorough education in the excellent common schools, then, and still liberally and carefully sustained by the able legislators of that state. After leaving the common school, he passed through the education preparatory to admission to a collegiate course, and was admitted to Yale College, where he graduated with the honors of that ancient University, in the year 1800.

"'Judge Huntington left college with a thorough classical education, and at once entered upon the study of the law, in the office of his brother, Enoch Huntington, Jr., then a practicing lawyer of good standing in his native town. After the usual period of study, he was admitted to practice at the bar of Middlesex county, where he commenced business, in connection with his brother.

"'He had already attained a reputable standing among the younger members of the bar of his native state, when about the year 1806, he removed to the state of New York, and settled in practice, in the village of Waterford, Saratoga county. Here he soon rose to eminence as a lawyer, and ranked among the ablest of the many distinguished men who have graced the bar of that county. He removed to Troy in the year 1825. For many years his professional business here was among the largest and most lucrative. His counsel was sought in the most important causes, particularly in those relating to real estate. In this branch of the law he was a perfect master, as well from his intimate acquaintance with the decisions of the English courts, as from the fact, that the period of his practice, reaching to upwards of half a century, embraced that space in the history of our country during which not only the system of our law of real estate, but in fact almost the entire body of American common law, has been formed. When he commenced practice there was no American commentator on the law, and the reported cases, either in Connecticut or New York, did not exceed half a dozen volumes.

"'Under the administration of Gov. Clinton, he was appointed to the office of judge of the court of common pleas of this county, and discharged its duties with great ability and impartiality. His decisions always commanded respect, as they were felt to be the result of an honest conviction of the right of the case, in a mind guided by patient research, and stored with legal lore.

"'In the death of Judge Huntington, his brethren of the bar mourn the loss of one in whose counsels they have often confided — whose legal acquirements did honor to their profession — whose professional relations to them all, were kind, courteous, and honorable, and whose social intercourse so often helped to strip labor of its drudgery — relieve life of its tedium, and to strew our pathway with pleasant, harmless trifles and gay flowers.'"

He married for his first wife, November 7, 1734, Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Drake) Rockwell, who was born in Windsor, July 24, 1713, and died September 24, 1751, aged thirty-eight years and two months. Her gravestone records her virtues thus: "Faithful and dutiful wife, a kinder mother, charitable and beneficent neighbor, an understanding and exemplary Christian, her delight was in the law of God and her life devoted to his glory. Christ Jesus, in whom she believed, was her all in prosperity, in adversity, in sickness and in death."

He married for his second wife, August 7, 1754, Mrs. Sarah Norton, who survived him, dying February 19, 1788.

His gravestone contains this inscription, still legible: "Hon. Jona. Huntington, Esq., died Sept. 15, 1773, Etat. 77. He was for several years a member of the Council of this colony and Judge of the Court for this county, which important offices he sustained with fidelity and reputation. He was from early life to the time of his death, an ornament and a successful practitioner of physic. His life was a series of piety to God and benevolence to mankind, and the closing scene exhibited a striking picture of that fortitude and patience which Christ alone can inspire. Having endured the most exquisite pains, without a murmur or complaint, he at last meekly resigned his soul into the hands of Him who gave it, in well grounded hope of immortal glory."

The testimony of his gravestone is abundantly confirmed by contemporary history and by tradition. He was, in 1752, a member of the lower house of the Colonial Legislature, and its speaker.

He was an Assistant or member of the Upper House of the Connecticut Council from 1754 to 1758, where his associates, among whom he stood high, were among the ablest men Connecticut has yet produced: and the period of his membership was a trying period of our colonial history—that of the sanguinary French War. In May, 1749, he was appointed a Justice of Quorum, and as such had a seat on the bench from the June term 1749 to 1754, when he was appointed Chief Judge, and held this office until June 1757.

HEZEKIAH HUNTINGTON, born October 3, 1728, in Windham Conn., and married, November 28, 1754, Submit Murdock. He was in service during the Revolution, going to Boston with the first troops raised in Connecticut, with a major's commission. Seeing the miserable condition of the arms then in the hands of the soldiers, he went to Philadelphia and made a proposal to congress, to return to Windham and open a manufactory for repairing muskets, and other arms. On this condition Washington returned his commission, and he served the government many years, in repairing and making arms. He claimed that he was the first man in America who made a gun. After exhausting his means in this service, he went to Philadelphia and effected a settlement with the government, receiving as his pay, 74,000 dollars of continental paper. The value of this suddenly depreciated, so that, to use his own language, a hundred dollars of it would not buy a breakfast. The entire package was kept many years, in hopes of its redemption by the government, and finally committed, by one of his sons, to the flames, after his death. He and his wife lived about ten years in Walpole, N. H., but returned to Windham, Conn., about the year 1803, where he died, September 17, 1807; and his wife, April 24, 1808, aged 74 years.

He is spoken of as a man of high character and position. At a meeting of the Governor and Committee of Safety, March 8, 1777, it was agreed that, "whereas Thomas Allen of New London, by authority of such town, is judged inimical to the liberties of the American States and ought to be removed from said town, therefore, voted, resolved and ordered, that said Allen be sent to the town of Windham, there to abide within the limits of the first society, under the care and oversight of Major Ebenezer Backus and Capt. Hezekiah Huntington, two of the Committee of Inspection."

He was major of the fifth regiment of Militia and in service in Connecticut and Rhode Island.

EDWARD HASTINGS RIPLEY, born in 1840; married Amelia Dychman Van Doren, May 25, 1878.

Mr. Ripley was in the civil war, and attained the ranks Colonel of 9th Vermont Infantry and Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers. He commanded the First Brigade, 3d Division, 24th Army Corps, Army of the James, at the capture and occupation of Richmond, Va., April 3, 1865. His brigade was chosen to police the city and eventually stopped the conflagration, and opened the doors of the notorious Libby Prison, and Castle Thunder, and set the northern captives free. A full and very interesting account of this work can be found in a book called the "Capture of Richmond," written by General Ripley and published by G. P. Putnam's Sons in 1907. The General died September 14, 1915, survived by his widow and two daughters.

RICHARD HUNTINGTON, born February 13, 1819, in Yarmouth, N. S.; married, September 1, 1847, in Sydney, N. S., Isabel Mary Lucretia Armsworthy. She was born in Sydney, N. S., and died April 14, 1878, in Yarmouth, N. S.

He was editor and proprietor of the Yarmouth Tribune. He taught school in Lawrencetown, N. S., and, later, edited a paper in Sydney, N. S. He also lived for some years in Chelsea, Mass., returning to Yarmouth, N. S., in 1855, and died there May 13, 1883. He was for some years Postmaster of Yarmouth, N. S.

Mr. Huntington had more than ordinary gifts, and, but for his extreme modesty, would have become famous in the field of literature. His writings, both of prose and poetry, show talent almost amounting to genius. Perhaps his best known work is now the famous "Indian Names of Acadia," which has been attributed to DeMille, but is now published under Mr. Huntington's name in the "Treasury of Canadian Verse," and other compilations of Canadian poetry. His memory is still treasured in many Yarmouth homes.

They belonged to the Anglican Church.

HERBERT HUNTINGTON, born July 27, 1799, married, April 22, 1830, Rebecca, widow of Lieut. Thomas Russel, of H. B. M. Regiment. He early in life interested himself in politics, and to the end showed himself to be a man of the people and for the people. Human rights, even against governmental demands, were sufficient incentives for his earnest and self-sacrificing advocacy. "He became distinguished for his stern devotion to liberal principles, and for incorruptible integrity. Honors and emoluments he spurned and despised, when weighed in the balance of a people's rights." Well was it said of him,

Digitized by Google

"he was in no sense an ordinary man." In a tribute to his memory, found in the Provincial Magazine, and still later, in the Yarmouth Herald, are found most flattering testimonials of his worth. It says of him: "he was the author of no literary work, he threw no new or additional light upon any department of science or philosophy, he was not an orator, nor even a ready and graceful speaker, he led no victorious army, in his manners there was nothing to captivate; and yet, perhaps no man in Nova Scotia ever enjoyed a more deep, general, and hearty popularity. He was no courtier, no sycophant; and he was too high minded, and had too much self-respect to pander to vulgar prejudices. The problem of his popularity is, however, easily solved. With him it was a consequence, not an object. It was the necessary and unsought result of public services ably and faithfully performed."

For eighteen years he was a member of the Nova Scotia legislature; in 1839, he was appointed by the House of Assembly, one of two delegates to lay before the colonial secretary in London the provincial grievances. In 1848 he was chosen executive councilor, and in 1849 was appointed financial secretary of the Province. Both of these offices he resigned in 1850 in consequence of declining health. After his death, which occurred in September, 1851, the legislature of his native Province unanimously voted to erect to his memory a monument at the public expense.

10. JOSEPH BUCKINGHAM, born December 21, 1779. He was, in June, 1804, allowed to take the name of Buckingham, instead of Tinker, and as Joseph T. Buckingham he was long and well known, especially as the editor of the Boston Courier. He married, July 28, 1805, Melinda, daughter of Caleb and Mary (Murdock) Alvord, of Greenfield, Mass., by whom he had a family of thirteen children, among whom have been three lawyers, two ministers, one physician, and one agent of the general government in western surveys. He died in Cambridge, April 11, 1861.

    The Personal Memoirs of Joseph T. Buckingham furnish ample testimony to the personal worth of his mother. She must have been a woman of more than ordinary intelligence and of sincere and true piety, poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith. Her death was from consumption. Her son says of her: "She was never happier than during the last six weeks of her life. She well knew that life was near its close, and she looked for its end with entire resignation and cheerfulness. If she expressed any impatience, it was that the wheels of time moved so slowly. * * * In the intervals of suffering, when strength revived, she labored to impress on my mind the necessity of faith in the Christian religion, according to the Calvinistic interpretation; admonished me to be faithful to my employer; and charged me, by all the love she bore me, to stay with him till I should be twenty-one years old, whatever inconvenience and destitution I might endure, or whatever sacrifice it cost me."

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., March 1, 1665. Here he married, October 29, 1686, Mary, daughter, probably of William Clark, of Wethersfield. He removed to Lebanon in 1700, having sold his houselot and house in Norwich for a parsonage. He was Deputy to the General Court from Lebanon in October, 1705, and May, 1708; was appointed Lieutenant of first trainband of Lebanon, in May, 1709. Before his removal he had become a public man, having filled several offices, being as early as 1692 appointed constable, having already been one of the Townsmen. How well he was thought of in Norwich, appears from his appointment by the citizens of Norwich, ten years after his removal to Lebanon, on a Committee to locate the new meeting house about which a serious dispute had arisen. The site chosen by the committee was not approved by the town, and the church was erected upon another spot. But a few years vindicated the wisdom of the committee, as was abundantly testified by a second church, built upon the place selected by them.

He was a large landholder both in Norwich and Lebanon.

His wife's name appears on the list of the Lebanon church in 1701; but his own was not added until 1707.

In 1687, February 13, the town of Norwich granted him a parcel of land at Trading Cove Brook, "by his father's, to be laid out by measure, 30 or 40 rods wide the length of his father's land."

He died in Lebanon, May 10, 1717, and his wife, October 5, 1743.

ELIZABETH (HUNTINGTON) CLARK, born April 24, 1689–9, in Norwich, Conn.; married February 23, 1710, Moses, son of Daniel and Hannah (Pratt) Clark, of Lebanon, Conn. He died September 18, 1749, and she died December 27, 1761.

The Lebanon grave-yard contains these tributes to the memory of Mr. and Mrs. Clark: "Here lie interred the remains of Moses Clark, who was of a sober, charitable, virtuous disposition; who having served his generation faithfully, departed this life in hope of life eternal."

Of Elizabeth (Huntington) Clark, her gravestone thus speaks: "Here lies the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, the wife of Mr. Moses Clark, who recommended herself and religion to the world by piety and good works; a midwife who feared God, skillful and greatly useful in the art of healing, who, to the public loss and grief, was suddenly called to a better hope."

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born October 16, 1723, in Lebanon, Conn. He graduated at Yale in 1743, studied theology and was a short time a preacher. He afterwards became a merchant, and resided in Lebanon, Canterbury, and East Haddam. He married, first, May 23, 1751, Rebecca Fairbanks, who died September 15, 1754. He married for his second wife, May 25, 1757, Dorothy Gates of East Haddam. She was born May 5, 1729, and died October 29, 1821. Early in life she devoted herself to God in public profession of religion, and in various scenes of life she displayed a uniform and consistent Christian walk. As she advanced in life her piety shone with an increasing lustre, and, in connection with a natural sweetness of disposition and amiableness of temper, it shed a peculiar loveliness on her old age. Few mothers in Israel have displayed more patience, serenity and cheerfulness in the decline of life, and few have died more lamented by surviving friends. The memory of the just is blessed. He was chosen deacon of the Canterbury church, while living there, March 26, 1753. About the year 1769 he removed to East Haddam, where he continued to reside until his death, March 20, 1797. He probably went to Canterbury about the year 1752, as that is the date of his own and his first wife's admission to the church there by letter. His second wife was admitted to that church in 1759. He was chosen deacon and clerk of the church in East Haddam in 1770. He was a justice of the peace in East Haddam and a public man of considerable note.

ARITHUSA CATHERINE (DIBOLL) HUGGINS, born January 27, 1820, in Bethany, Penn.; married, September 24, 1841, in Sardinia, O., James Edward, son of Robert and Sarah (Irwin) Huggins. He was born near Red Oak, O., June 24, 1816. His parents moved to that community a few years before his birth, in company with the Rev. James Gilliland and others, who were converts in North Carolina of the Rev. William Davis.

This little colony founded the Red Oak Presbyterian church, and they and their descendants until the Rebellion contended openly and fearlessly for the emancipation of the slaves.

Mr. Huggins was a lawyer and farmer, and was three times elected justice of the peace. Long after he arrived at maturity he studied law, and was admitted to the bar. He was a delegate from Highland County to the first Republican convention held in Ohio, which convened in Columbus, O., in 1855. He died in Brown County, Ohio, near Mt. Orab. Mrs. Huggins died September 24, 1896, in the same town. She joined the Presbyterian church at Westmoreland, Penn., when about eleven years old, and remained a member of that faith all her life, having belonged to the Sardinia, O., church for about fifty-six years.

LYNDE HUNTINGTON, born March 22, 1767, in Lebanon, Conn. He graduated at Yale, in 1788, and was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Branford, Conn., October 28, 1795. He married, June 15, 1796, Anna, widow of Rev. Jason Atwater, his predecessor, in Branford, and daughter of Rev. Warham and Ann Williams, her mother being a daughter of Rev. Samuel Hall, of Cheshire. Her paternal grandparents were the Rev. Dr. Stephen and Abigail (Davenport) Williams, of Springfield, Mass. His early ministry was one of promise, but a lingering disease soon set in, and prematurely terminated his period of earthly labor; not, however, until this record of his character and usefulness could be truthfully drawn; "Possessing a sound mind, the spirit of love and the wisdom of the prudent, he preached Christian doctrines and duties in their connection with all fidelity, was incessant in pastoral labors and an example to the flock. Entirely resigned, under a lingering illness he died in faith, September 19, 1804."

The venerable Daniel Waldo, late chaplain in Congress, his classmate in college, thus testifies: "His standing in college as a classical scholar was respectable, and his moral and religious character unstained. He and Moses Hallock were two of the most exemplary scholars in the class. That he made an able and successful minister was a fact, though he died in the morning of life."

The following is an obituary notice published soon after his death in the N. Y. Tribune: Of prominent men who have died recently, no one was more respected and beloved than Mr. Lynde A. Huntington of Charlestown, Mass. Mr. Huntington was formerly a resident of this city, but for many years past has been engaged in business in Boston, where his whole life seemed to evince rather a desire to use his wealth for the good of others than as a means of self-aggrandizement, and though his acts of charity were mostly done in private, they were none the less frequent and bountiful. He was a true friend to not only the oppressed and destitute, but also to the erring, and unofficially, though effectively aided the Wardens of the State Prison in perfecting those measures of reform which a correspondent of the Tribune recently wrote of in complimentary terms. For many years Mr. Huntington spent a portion of every Sunday at the Prison, teaching and advising the convicts.

CHILDREN.

* 1. GEORGE WILSON, born January 15, 1839.

2. EMILY, born January 3, 1841, in Lebanon, Conn., and was educated at Wheaton Seminary. For twenty years she conducted the Wilson Industrial School for Girls at Tompkins Square and Eighth Street, N. Y. This was the first institution of the kind in this country, or perhaps in the world. Here she made several pioneer ventures in industrial and charitable education, which spread rapidly throughout the United States, and foreign countries as well. The Boys' Club, with which the late E. H. Harriman wsa identified, was organized by her, and from that center radiated the system of establishing centers for teaching cookery to children, particularly children of the poor.

   Her "Kitchen Garden," which had a wide vogue, was published in 1878. Other books of hers were: "Child's Kitchen Garden Primer" (1884), "Introductory Cooking Lessons," "Little Housekeeper," and "How to Teach Kitchen Garden" (1903). Under her administration of the Wilson Mission, any poor boy could come to the Boys' Club, and any poor girl could come to the Kitchen Garden, and any poor mother could bring her infant for care while she was working. Her last work was in connection with the New York Cooking School.—N. Y. Times, December 7, 1909.

DAN HUNTINGTON, born October 11, 1774, in Lebanon, Conn., graduated at Yale, 1794, was tutor in Williams College from 1794 to 1796, and the next two years tutor in Yale. He was pastor of the Congregational church in Litchfield, from 1797 to 1809, and of that in Middletown, from 1809 to 1816. From Middletown he removed to Hadley, Mass., where he resided ever after. Of his character and promise in early life, I am permitted to record the testimony of his classmate, the Hon. Judge Thos. S. Williams, of Hartford, Conn. "His amiable temper, his good sense, and his pleasant manners, made him an agreeable companion. But he was too much of a student to spend much time in indulging his social nature. As a scholar, his standing in his class was high, and he was soon appointed as tutor at Williamstown, and from thence transferred to New Haven."

After removing to Hadley, he refused to settle again as pastor, though he continued to preach. He supplied for awhile a Unitarian congregation, and his views of Christian doctrines undergoing a change, he at length avowed himself a Unitarian. Yet with this change in his creed, we have the testimony of his orthodox brethren, no change was observable in his Christian character. His prayers in the family, and indeed the entire religious culture of his eminently Christian home, were what they had been while holding and teaching the orthodoxy of Connecticut. What his character as preacher was, before vacating the pulpit, is abundantly shown by the following testimonial from the pen of Rev. Parsons Cook, in Dr. Sprague's Annals of the American Pulpit. He is speaking of the settlement of a colleague with Dr. Hopkins, of Hadley, for which place Mr. Huntington, then recently dismissed from his people in Litchfield, was a candidate. "He was enjoying a splendid popularity as a preacher, and but for a jealousy of family influence, the people would have called him unanimously to be their pastor. While this matter was in agitation, Dr. Hopkins expressed great interest to secure his settlement; and even said that he would be willing to bear his shoes if he could see him settled there. He had such a strong conviction that the interests of the people would be promoted by it, that he would make any sacrifices to secure it."

He married, January 1, 1801, Elizabeth Whiting, only daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Porter) Phelps, of Hadley, who was born February 4, 1779. She was a most excellent Christian woman, as is abundantly testified, both by the affection of her family, and by the grateful recollections of a large circle of beloved neighbors and friends. She was early a subject of grace, and united with the orthodox church in Hadley. Though, from a change in her views on the subject of the Trinity, she did not continue through life a communicant in that church, it is still recorded of her, by her husband, that "this sacred covenant it was her practice to renew, in form, with the most thorough examination and fervent prayer at the recurrence of each anniversary of her first vow, until the day of her death, which, by a singular providence, was itself one of those anniversaries, April 6, 1847."

FREDERIC DAN HUNTINGTON, born May 28, 1819, in Hadley, Mass.; married, September 4, 1843, in Boston, Mass., Hannah Dane, daughter of Epes and Mary Otis (Lincoln) Sargent. She was born March 21, 1823. She died February 22, 1910.

He graduated from Amherst College in 1839, prepared for ministry in the Unitarian denomination at the Harvard Divinity School, and was called to the pastorate of the South Congregational parish in Boston, Mass.

His distinction as a preacher and lecturer led to his election to the post of Plummer Professor of Christian Morals and Chaplain at Harvard University in 1855.

In 1861 he entered the priesthood of the Episcopal church and became Rector of Emmanuel church, a new parish on the Back Bay in Boston. Here he passed nine years of great activity, taking a prominent part in the Mission and other work of the Diocese; establishing a Mission Chapel at Ternor Street, the Church of the Good Shepherd, and being connected with most of the large church and charitable organizations of that period. In 1869 he was elected by the new Diocese of Central New York its first Bishop, and removed to Syracuse, N. Y., exercising the duties of the episcopal office for thirty-five years and until his death, which occurred at Hadley, in the ancestral home which was his birthplace, July 11, 1904.

From his college days he was connected with editorial work on the Christian Register, The Monthly Religious Magazine, the Church Monthly and the Gospel Messenger. In his later years he spoke and wrote much on social readjustment, the relations of labor and capital and kindred subjects, and was for some time president of the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor, and of the Christian Social Union.

His broad sympathies and vigor of mind were retained to the end of his busy life. Among many publications, those most widely known are Sermons for the People; Christian Believing and Living; two volumes of Sermons entitled "Christ in the Christian Year;" Helps to a Holy Lent; Forty Days with the Master; Divine Aspects of Human Society; Personal Religious Life in the Ministry; Good Talking and Good Manners, Fine Arts.

The largest circulation of all has been that of a small volume, still in demand by teachers, written while he was a professor at Harvard, and entitled "Unconscious Tuition."

4. JAMES OTIS SARGENT, born July 23, 1854, in Roxbury, Mass. He prepared for college at the Roxbury Latin School, and graduated from Harvard University in 1875; studied for orders in the Episcopal Church at St. Andrews Divinity School at Syracuse, N. Y., and was ordained priest by his father, the Bishop of Central New York, in 1880. For several years he had charge of Calvary Mission in Syracuse, and in 1881 removed to New York City, where he took part in the establishment of the Order of the Holy Cross, being professed as its first member under Bishop Henry Codman Potter, of the Diocese of New York, on November 25, 1884.

   At different times he has held office as Superior of the Order, and was instrumental in the erection of its present home at West Park on the Hudson River. For many years he has been engaged in conducting missions, conferences and retreats in different parts of the country. During the time of his residence in New York City, while in charge of the Church of the Holy Cross, he became associated with the Knights of Labor, spoke frequently in behalf of the Single Tax, interested himself in the settlement of labor troubles, and, together with other clergymen, established the Church Association in the Interests of Labor.

GEORGE PUTNAM HUNTINGTON, born July 3, 1844, in Boston, Mass.; married in Boston, April 16, 1874, Lilly St. Agneau, eldest daughter of Henry and Lucy Theodora Gellineau (Stearns) Barrett.

He prepared for college in Cambridge High School, and graduated from Harvard in 1864. He studied for the ministry of the Episcopal church in Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn. Having been ordained deacon in April, 1868, he took charge of St. Paul's Church, Malden, Mass., of which he was rector from 1869 to 1884. His health being impaired by overwork he moved to Ashfield, Mass., in December, 1884, to take charge of St. John's Church, of which he was chosen rector in 1886. Improved health allowed him to accept in 1891 a call to St. Thomas' Church, Hanover, N. H.—a work of deep interest to him, as it brought him into close contact with the students of Dartmouth College, where he was instructor in Hebrew from 1896 to 1903. That college conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1897. He died in Hanover, July 11, 1904, and was buried on the same day as his father in the family lot at Hadley, Mass. Until his death, besides his own parish and unorganized missionary work in the neighborhood, he had charge of organized missions in Norwich, Vt., Lebanon, N. H., and, in summer, at St. Peter's by the Sea, Ogunquit, Me. His intense devotion to his calling as pastor and priest was ever marked by missionary zeal, but was relieved by active interest in botanical, literary and educational pursuits. He was elected in 1896, a member of the New England Botanical Club; was one of the compilers of "The Treasury of the Psalter," (A. Williams & Co., Boston, 1881), and edited "Comments of John Ruskin on the Divina Commedia." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1903.)

SYBIL (HUNTINGTON) MAY, born in February, 1734–5, in Lebanon, Conn.; married, November 22, 1757, Eleazer, son of Hezekiah and Anna (Stillman) May, of Wethersfield, Conn. He was born March 11, 1733, in Wethersfield.

Mr. May graduated from Yale College in 1752, and was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Haddam, June 30, 1756. There, in usefulness and honor, he continned in the ministry for forty-seven years until his death, which occurred July 9, 1803. His wife was considered quite an artist in her young days, and was highly educated and accomplished. It is stated that she gave early lessons in art to John Trumbull, who, by her advice, pursued the study and practice by which, as an historical painter, he became famous.

Mrs. May painted a hunting scene over the fireplace when their new house was built, which was preserved when the house was torn down, and presented to Statira Emma May, when she married David, (1. 3. 6. 2. 9. 2. 5.)

NATHANIEL GILBERT HUNTINGTON, born October 30, 1785, in Wethersfield, Rocky Hill Parish; married, in 1812, Betsey, daughter of Zephaniah Tucker, of Derby.

He prepared for college under the instructions of Dr. Nathan Perkins, of Hartford, and entered Yale in 1802. During his junior year he became a subject of grace and resolved to prepare for the ministry. He graduated in 1806, and was honored with a master's degree in 1833. He was licensed by the Hartford North Association in 1809.

In the following year he received a call to settle over the Congregational church in Bethany, Conn., and was ordained August 22, 1810. In this place he labored with great acceptance until obliged, by the progress of pulmonary complaints, to ask and insist upon a dismissal, which was granted, greatly to the regret of his parish, in 1822. He removed to Orange in 1840, where he died in the faith he had preached, February 20, 1848.

Of his labors in Bethany the Rev. C. Brewster, of Orange, Conn., in his funeral sermon, says "The church were harmonious during the whole time he was their pastor. It was also blessed with revivals, and one especially of considerable power". Of his character the same authority says, "His piety was of the contemplative cast. He exhibited the Christian graces of meekness and resignation in no ordinary degree. As a minister he applied himself diligently and faithfully to his work. His scholarship was of a high order. He had a good knowledge of Greek and Latin classics, had read the Hebrew Bible through, and was probably a better Hebraist than any other pastor in the vicinity at the time. He left behind him quite an amount of poetical composition, mainly of the religious cast. He prepared also two elementary geographies for the use of schools, which were published in Hartford." He contributed also several articles for the columns of the Christian Spectator, which evince scholarship of a high order. His widow lived with her daughter Mrs. Merwin, in Milford, until her death.

ABRAM AUGUSTUS HUNTINGTON, born December 18, 1818; married, January 23, 1844, in Cypress, Ky., Elizabeth Jane Ward. She was born October 27, 1827, in Kentucky, and died December 22, 1909, in Winnebago City, Minn. She was a noble type of true womanhood, who had reached and passed the allotted span of three score and ten years of useful life. He was not a man to make a confidant of many, children in particular. He was a man of a very positive nature, and very strong in his convictions of right, always maintaining his view in a gentlemanly way.

He was much respected even by those who could not think as he did. He was a fast friend with many good men. During the Texas trouble, he was in the engineer corps with Col. Sam Houston, after which he went to Kentucky on account of his health, having while with Houston contracted the fever, and been very near death. He stayed in Cypress, Kentucky, some five years.

Hearing of the great things of the North, in the way of health and wealth, he went to Wisconsin in 1846, traveling by a prairie schooner, taking his wife and baby with him. He stuck in Columbus, Wis., where their nearest market (Milwaukee) was 64 miles away.

He bought himself a farm, and settled down to good hard work, and, between farming and surveying, managed to get along until known. While residing there he represented his Legislative district in the Wisconsin House of Representatives, and was also sergeant at arms some time.

He almost always had some local public position, but never seeking an office. He sold out and went to Winnebago City, Minn., in 1863, where he died, February 13, 1875.

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born April 10, 1805, in Hemmingsford, Canada; married, January 14, 1835, in Plattsburgh, N. Y., Polly, daughter of William and Orpha (Judd) Brown. She was born in 1810, in Plattsburgh, N. Y., and died in 1874, in Iowa.

He was a farmer. He removed to Dane Co., Wis., in November, 1853. In 1869 he moved to Green Co., Iowa, where he was killed in a tornado, June 18, 1871.

He bore arms for a short time under the Queen in Canada. He frequently held minor township offices, and probably some minor offices in the local Episcopal Church in Canada. There was little of renown in the life of Samuel Huntington. An unassuming and noble man, quiet in all his life among his neighbors; a good father, who by kindness and love controlled his family, and, with the noble mother of his children, brought them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

SUSANNA (HUNTINGTON) DANA, born June 23, 1730, in Lebanon, Conn., and married, June 5, 1757, Anderson Dana, a lawyer of Ashford, Conn. He was descended from Richard Dana, a French Protestant who had fled from persecution, first to England, and about 1640 to America, settling at what is now the town of Brighton, Massachusetts.

In the fall of 1772 this family removed into the Wyoming valley, on the Susquehannah. With her seventh child in her arms, not yet two months old, and her sixth, a little boy of only three summers, holding on, as they journeyed on horseback, the mother rode that whole distance, some three hundred miles into the wilderness, the last fifty miles having only marked trees for her guide.

"Here," (I quote from the address of Rev. Mr. Bouton, at the funeral of Rev. Sylvester Dana, June 11, 1849, the latter being the little boy of three years alluded to above, "for six years the Dana family prospered. In 1778 the father represented the town of Westmoreland in the general assembly of Connecticut. Returning home on the 28th of June, after an absence of eight weeks, he was an actor and a victim in that tragic scene which the very next week occurred in that beautiful valley. On the third of July a band of British troops and tories, led on by Col. John Butler, with seven hundred savage auxiliaries, attacked and utterly destroyed the settlement. Most of the men were slain, their homes burned, their property either destroyed or carried away, and women and children who escaped the massacre, fled through the wilderness to the nearest white settlement." Among those who thus fled, was Susanna Dana, who, "with seven children, in a state then of total destitution, commenced her flight on foot, amid the darkness of the night, through that dreary wilderness of fifty miles. Wolves howled on every side of them; but the terror of savages who might be on their track hastened their steps. Nor did they stop, except as necessity for rest and refreshment compelled, till the three hundred miles that separated them from their kindred in Ashford had been retraced." Nor does this give the full measure of that mother's ability and courage. When it became apparent that their only safety was in flight, she set herself calmly to the work of collecting such food as would be most easily taken with them; and then, as though there was still something besides present salvation desirable, she collected a pillowcase of papers and public documents, as her husband had been much in public life for the colony, and determined if possible to take them with her. In this she succeeded, and Mr. Minor, the historian of that awful tragedy, acknowledges his obligations for that noble thoughtfulness. Few incidents in the lives of illustrious women exceed this, in all the elements of true greatness. Not till the family, eight in number, had reached Bullock's Mountain, ten miles from their late happy home, did they learn of the deaths of those two husbands, their needed protectors. Here they learned the horrible story, and alone, yet with unfaltering step, they urged on their unprotected flight.

HENRY EDWARDS HUNTINGTON, born February 27, 1850, in Oneonta, N. Y.; married, first, Mary Alice, daughter of Edwin and Clarissa (Stoddard) Prentice, of Newark, N. J., November 17, 1873. He married, second, Arabella D., widow of Collis Potter Huntington (1. 3. 6. 7. 6. 2. 6.) July 16, 1913, in Paris, France.

At the age of seventeen he became a clerk in a hardware store in Oneonta, N. Y. Two years later he obtained a position in a wholesale hardware store in New York City. A short time afterwards he was placed by his uncle, C. P. Huntington, in charge of a sawmill at St. Albans, W. Va., which the latter had bought in order to get at a reasonable price ties for building the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad. He soon bought the sawmill, and ran it successfully for three years. In 1880 he began his career in railroad building and management. He superintended the construction of a great part of the Memphis, Paducah and Northern Railway. He became Vice-President and General Manager of the Kentucky Central, and several other lines came under his direction. He was first Vice-President of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and a director in many other important corporations. On the death of his uncle, Collis P. Huntington, in 1900, his vast railroad interests came under the control of the nephew, a great part of which he soon after transferred to E. H. Harriman. He turned his attention to electric railways, acquired the control of the street railroads in Los Angeles, Cal., and developed them vastly, thereby connecting that city with many other places in the Southern part of California.

He also acquired a controlling interest in the Pacific Light and Power Corporation, which now furnishes electricity for the electric cars and for many other purposes. He spent some years in Los Angeles, and built a very fine residence there. The foregoing is by no means a complete account of his activities and successes.

Of late he has resided mainly in New York, and has given his attention more to book collecting than to corporate management. He owns one of the most valuable libraries in the world.

It is through his courtesy that we are enabled to give further information as to the ancestry of our progenitor, Simon (1.)

1. EDWIN, born September 15, 1843, and died March 25, 1845, in Waterbury, Conn.

2. EDWARD HENRY, born September 5, 1847, in Oneonta, N. Y. After attending private schools he fitted himself for business life at a college in Poughkeepsie, and, shortly after completing his course there, became associated in a confidential relation with his uncle, the late Collis P. Huntington, and for a period of thirty-five years was connected with the New York office of Mr. Huntington, by whom he was highly prized and with whose activities he was closely associated for that entire period.

   Upon retiring from active business life, Mr. Pardee returned to Oneonta, and resided there, enjoying the competency acquired during his business career, and finding keen pleasure in the associations of his early life, combined with the gratification of the finer qualities of mind and heart. Some twelve years since he acquired a commanding site opposite the city, overlooking the scenes of his childhood, and there built an attractive country residence, Colliscroft, in which he took a just pride, it being furnished richly and attractively and supplied with a well and carefully selected library indicative of the refined taste of the man. While caring little for the frivolities of society he was fond of music and literature and especially of the companionship of congenial associates. He read widely and remained to the last a student of men and affairs. He was always an interesting companion and conversationalist. He was a member of the Oneonta, City and Country clubs, relinquishing his membership in social organizations in New York City upon returning to Oneonta. He was public spirited, manifesting always a lively interest in the social and economic welfare of his home city, where he died November 5, 1914.

   We are indebted to him and the data he carefully collected for many items of interest in this memoir.

COLLIS POTTER HUNTINGTON, born April 16, 1821, in Harwinton, Conn.; married, first, September 16, 1844, Elizabeth T. Stoddard, of Cornwall, Conn. She died in 1883. He married, second, July 12, 1884, Mrs. Arabella D. Worsham. He died at his camp, Pine Knot, in the Adirondacks, August 13, 1900.

Extract from Hartford Daily Times, August 14, 1915. At his death he was one of the six men who were at the head of the American railroad system, an art connoisseur and patron, a humanitarian and financier.

His first employment was on a farm at a salary of eighty-four dollars a year and board. After he had saved $175 he started in the clock business and managed to get $3,000 credit on the recommendation of a neighbor. In 1842 he entered into partnership with his brother, Solon, in the general merchandise business at Oneonta, N. Y. Six years later he went to California as a merchant, and, at Sacramento, began business under a tent, selling implements and necessaries to miners. A store next followed.

Mr. Huntington then opened partnership in the hardware business with Mark Hopkins, the firm being Huntington & Hopkins. Later on Leland Stanford and Crocker brothers became his business partners and Stanford gave him his first incentive to become a railroad builder.

Mr. Huntington then, with Hopkins, the Crockers, T. T. Judah and Stanford, went to work on a scheme, and the survey of the Sierra Nevada mountains for a trans-continental railroad was made on money advanced by them. The result was the organization of the Central Pacific Railroad company, with Stanford, president, Huntington, vice-president, and Hopkins, treasurer, with a capital of $8,500,000. Subsequent undertakings more vast followed, which included the first railroad feat of planning and perfecting the whole California railroad system of 8,900 miles of track. Then followed the formation of a trans-continental line from Portland Ore., to New Orleans.

Next followed the construction of the Southern Pacific railroad from San Francisco through Los Angeles, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, a track from ocean to ocean, and the merging of twenty-six corporations with 9,000 miles of track into the organization known as the Southern Pacific company.

The Chesapeake & Ohio railroad was next completed, after the state of Virginia had failed to complete it, and in which endeavor many contractors were ruined.

Mr. Huntington then pushed his connections westward, through West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, until he was able to ride his own private car over his own tracks from the gateway of the Old Dominion on the Atlantic to the Golden Gate on the Pacific coast, a feat accomplished by no other man in America.

Another enterprise which he was identified or associated with was the Pacific Mail Steamship company, with a fleet of sixteen vessels and 17,000 miles of water lines.

Mr. Huntington also founded the city of Newport News, Va., and invested more than $7,000,000 in a ship-yard there, which employed 4,000 men and turned out battleships. He there gave workmen every inducement to own their own homes.

CHILDREN. (ADOPTED.)

1. CLARA ELIZABETH PRENTICE, born in Sacramento, in 1860; was a niece of the first Mrs. C. P. Huntington, and was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Huntington. She married Prince Francis Hatzfeldt, of Wittenburg, Germany, October 28, 1889. They make their home in England.
2. ARCHER MILTON, is the son of Collis P. Huntington's second wife, by her first husband. He married, August 6, 1895, Helen Manchester Gates, (1. 3. 6. 7. 6. 2. 9. 1.). In 1904 he founded the Hispanic Society of America. Though its home and headquarters are in New York, and its origin is American, it is an international organization in membership, scope, and character of its work. For about fourteen years he devoted his time, and means to collecting, rare Spanish books, maps, coins, paintings, manuscripts, and objects of archæological interest. About forty thousand books, had thus been brought together in New York. On the eighteenth day of May, 1904, he and his wife, executed the deed of foundation of the Hispanic Society, to endow a free public library, museum, and educational institution, within the City of New York. Eight lots of land in Audubon Park, were conveyed, and three hundred and fifty thousand dollars granted as an endowment by this deed.

The honorary degree of Master of Arts, was conferred upon him, by Yale University in 1897. They reside in New York City.

ELLEN MARIA (HUNTINGTON) GATES, born August 12, 1835, in Torrington, Conn.; married, August 6, 1861, in Oneonta, N. Y., Isaac Edwin Gates, of Preston, Conn. She was educated in private seminaries in Galway, N. Y., and Hamilton, N. Y.

The high quality of Mrs. Gates' ethical and didactic poems — several of which have been set to music — has caused them to meet with an extraordinary welcome in the hearts of the people of all English-speaking countries. "Your Mission," "The Home of the Soul," "The Prodigal Child," "A Slumber Song," and "Eternity," may be mentioned as her most popular hymns. A collection of her poems — "Treasures of Kurium," was published in 1895, and another, "To the Unborn Peoples," in 1913. Mr. and Mrs. Gates reside in New York City.

DAVID HUNTINGTON, born November 24, 1745, in Lebanon, Conn. He graduated at Dartmouth in 1773, and the same year received the honorary degree of B.A., at Yale. Having pursued the study of theology, acceptably under his pastor, Rev. Dr. Solomon Williams, of Lebanon, he was ordained to the work of the gospel ministry, and installed over the church in Marlborough, Conn., in 1776, and remained there until 1797, a laborious and successful minister of Christ. He married, November 5, 1778, Elizabeth Foote, of Colchester, who proved to be to him a most excellent wife. She was as much distinguished for her fervent piety, and for her zeal in doing good, as for her remarkable intelligence, and her unusually complete personal culture.

After his dismission from his people in Marlborough, he preached a few Sabbaths in Salem, Conn., yet was never settled there. He was installed, November 8, 1797, over what is now the South Church, in Middletown, Conn. This church had been seriously endangered by the Separatists; but by the judicious and successful labors of Mr. H., comparative harmony was restored, and the church again brought to accept more decidedly than ever, the orthodox Congregational platform. He removed from this field of labor in 1803, and was installed over the Congregational church in North Lyme, on the 21st of December in that year. Here he remained a faithful preacher and pastor until his death, April 13, 1812. He was a man of eminent piety, and remarkable for a uniform and intense religious zeal. He preached twice on the day of his death, closing, most fittingly, his labors on earth by a sermon of great earnestness from the text, "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live." Before one o'clock, of the following morning, he was no more; yet though so suddenly called away, he left with all the composure of one about taking a pleasant walk. One who knew him well, testifies of him, that "he was a very serious minded man, and habitually sensible of the sacredness of his calling."

Mr. Mertens was Consular Agent of the United States for the Port of Valencia, Spain, and Consul for the Austrian Empire at the same port.

He was the grandson of Dr. Franz Carl Mertens, who was head of the Handlung Schule in Bremen, Germany, and who is still widely known in the scientific world of to-day through his botanical researches and the large herbarium and collection of algae in the museum at St. Petersburg, Russia.

Mr. Mertens was educated at the Gymnasium in Stuttgart, Germany, passed the examinations for volunteer service in the German army, served the required year, and subsequently, in 1871, came to the United States. Here he took out naturalization papers, as he greatly admired the laws and institutions of this country.

In 1878 he went to Valencia, Spain, where for twelve years he was diligent in forwarding the commercial and diplomatic relations between that country and the United States through his post as Consular Agent. His life was exposed to no little danger before the outbreak of our war with Spain, by infuriated mobs surrounding the consulate upon various occasions.

It was generally conceded that at one time he saved the city of Valencia from a day of bloodshed, when the populace had become greatly incensed at the insults they believed themselves to have received from the United States government.

The Queen Regent of Spain conferred an order of Knighthood upon him for his distinguished services. Exception was made regarding his nationality by the Austrian government because of his unusual qualifications, and he was induced to take over their Vice Consulate. Later his post was raised to full consulate, and he received two orders of Knighthood from the Emperor Franz Joseph, because of faithful services rendered, and a complimentary decoration for his long years of service. He died in Berlin, Germany, May 25, 1906.

Mrs. Mertens and her children were residing in Los Angeles, Calif., in 1915.

Copied from the original, which was written on the back of a photograph.

Alone in the dear old homestead,
That once was full of life,
Ringing with girlish laughter,
Echoing boyish strife,
We two are waiting together,
And oft as the shadows come,
With tremulous voice he calls me,
"Is it night" — are the children at home?"

"Yes, love," I answer him gently,
"They're all home long ago,"
And I sing in my quivering treble,
A song, so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber
With his head upon his hand
And I tell to myself the number
At home in a better land.

Home where never a sorrow,
Shall dim their eyes with tears,
Where the smile of God is on them,
Through all the sunny years.
I know — yet my arms are empty,
That fondly folded seven,
And the Mother heart within me,
Is almost starved for Heaven.

The young live forward in Hope,
The old live backward in Memory.

My time of sorrow and of joy, Great God, are in Thy hand.
All my enjoyments come from Thee, and go at Thy command.

HANNAH (HUNTINGTON) LYMAN, born August 25, 1749; married, October 15, 1772, the Rev. Joseph, son of Jonathan and Bethia Lyman, of Hatfield. He was born in Lebanon, Conn., April 14, 1749, and died March 27, 1828. His widow died in 1829. He was graduated at Yale, in 1767, with high honor. After a tutorship there, he was ordained March 4, 1772, pastor of the Congregational church in Hatfield, Mass., where, for over a half century he served the church and society with great ability, and wielded a marked influence among the ministry and churches of Western Massachusetts. He used to ascribe much of his pastoral success to his wife, whose ruling aim seemed to be to promote his usefulness. He was really one of the most commanding men in the ministry in his day; and in nothing of a worldly nature did he show more power over his contemporaries than in giving shape to pulpit influence during our revolutionary struggle. His colleague, Rev. Dr. Waterbury, late of Boston, speaking of him as he was, in the last two years of his life, makes this just estimate of his character; and this is said after he had passed into a state of bodily infirmity, which, to use his forcible language, "gave to him the aspect somewhat of a magnificent ruin." "The heavy column, and the broad span of the arch told, even in their dilapidation, the scale of grandeur on which the whole structure had been reared." * * * The Roman cast of his features, his expressive eye, his simplicity of language and manner, struck me very forcibly on my first introduction to him." This "great and good man" died March 27, 1828.

for two years he taught in the Berkshire Gymnasium at Pittsfield, Mass. From 1834 to 1841 he was principal of the Leicester Academy. Subsequently he lived in Boston, and later, for six years, in Auburndale, Mass., where, in 1848, he built the first house in that place. He was for some years editor of The Puritan Recorder, of Boston. From 1853 to 1858 he was engaged in business in Brooklyn, N. Y., and then for two years in the manufacture of paper at Lawrence, Mass. President Lincoln appointed him collector of internal revenue in the early part of the Civil War. Later he was treasurer of the J. C. Hoadley Steam Engine Company. He retired from business in 1878, and spent the remainder of his life in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was a member and official of the Church of the Pilgrims. In his old age he retained his health, physical and mental, in a very remarkable degree. He died February 4, 1900.

JOHN NELSON PARTRIDGE, born September 28, 1838, in Leicester, Mass.; married, first, September 28, 1865, Sarah Howard, daughter of Francis C. and Abby (Howard) Manning. She was born January 25, 1840, and died October 12, 1887. He married, second, at Westford, Conn., September 20, 1906, Charlotte, daughter of William Leonard and Anna Elizabeth Held.

He was educated at Leicester Academy, and entered a mercantile establishment in Boston. On September 2, 1861, he was appointed first lieutenant in the Twenty-fourth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers. He was, with his regiment, engaged in the battles at Roanoke Island, Newbern, Kinston, White Hall and Goldsborough in North Carolina. From December, 1862 until September, 1863, he served in operations in South Carolina, under Generals Hunter and Gilmore, which culminated in the capture of Forts Wagner and Sumter. He was promoted to a captaincy in April, 1864, and assigned to the Army of the James. He was wounded at Drury's Bluff, May 12, 1864, and honorably discharged in the following September.

He engaged in the warehouse business in Brooklyn, N. Y.; was fire commissioner and police commissioner in that city, and was president of the Brooklyn City and Newtown Railroad Company, from 1886 to 1887. On January 1, 1899, he was appointed by Gov. Roosevelt, Superintendent of Public Works of the State of New York. Of his administration of this office, President Roosevelt says in his autobiography, "I doubt if there ever was an important department of the New York state government run with a higher standard of efficiency and integrity." He was appointed Commissioner of Police in the enlarged City of New York, January 1, 1901. He served for twenty-five years in the Twenty third Regiment, National Guard, State of N.Y., during ten of which he was colonel.

the mother of his first five children, December 25, 1734. He married for his second wife, Rachel Wolcott of Windham. The name of the first wife is found on the Norwich first church records for the year 1707. He does not appear to have taken a very active part in the public affairs of the town, yet was evidently a man of more than ordinary personal culture for those days, and seems to have entailed upon his descendants a large portion of his own native talent. His second, late marriage will introduce a most marked anachronism into the family, making the fifth generation of his descendants nearly synchronize with the seventh generation of some of the descendants of his brother Simon. His name appears on the church records for the year 1724. He died in Norwich, September 13, 1741. His widow married, November 30, 1742, Joseph Bingham of Windham, who was born in 1687, and died, September 4, 1765.

DANIEL HUNTINGTON. born in Norwich, Conn., March 24, 1711. He, the first of many Huntingtons. graduated at Yale, in 1733. He married, September 25, 1740, Sybil Bull, of Milford. She died, October 12, 1744, and he married, for his second wife, July 24, 1746, Rebecca, (1.2.4.3.6.) see page 127. He died in Norwich, July 26, 1753, his widow living until April 15, 1798. He was a man of considerable prominence in the church, and in civil life; Justice of the Peace from 1751 until his death. He was especially active in healing the serious difficulties occasioned by the erratic movements of the "Separates," in the middle of the eighteenth century, where his learning and piety were of signal use. His gravestone bears this memorial of his worth. "He had a liberal education, was an excellent scholar, sound reasoner, sagacious, just, and much esteemed in civil life, a plain Christian, kind hearted, tender, pious, faithful friend, a good neighbor, and an honest man."

FELIX A. HUNTINGTON, born November 1, 1789, in Norwich, Conn.; married, December 11, 1811, Frances Snow. He commenced an early apprenticeship to commercial pursuits, and at the age of twenty engaged in trade with his brother James, and continued in business in Norwich until 1825, when he removed to New York. He here engaged in the drygoods business as an importer. Between the years 1832 and 1846 he was called by business to make a dozen voyages to Europe, during which he formed an extensive and desirable acquaintanceship both in England and on the continent. In 1849 he retired from business, removing from New York to Brooklyn, N. Y. His wife died January 23, 1859, aged sixty-nine years.

Mr. Huntington, whose death occurred February 18, 1862, had been a member and officer of the Church of the Redeemer in Brooklyn, from the organization of the parish. After his death, the vestry of the church testified in the strongest terms to his faithfulness and efficiency as an officer; to his wisdom and prudence as a counselor; to the sincerity of his Christian profession; to his "earnest desire for the extension of the church of our blessed Redeemer on earth; and to his evident preparation for the heavenly inheritance."

In 1830 the Mercantile Library Association of New York of which he was a member, voted him a Scholarship in Columbia College, New York, at which he graduated in 1834.

He traveled in Europe in 1836, and in Paris lived for three years where he was identified with an Association for the promotion of Christianity in that city. Returning to America, he was ordained to the Episcopal ministry by Bishop Onderdonk in 1840, and settled as Rector of Christ Church, Middle Haddam, Conn. In 1841 he succeeded the Rev. Dr. Lee in Rochdale, Pa., and in 1847 established the Astin Ridge Seminary for Young Ladies, of which he had successful control for ten years.

In 1859 he became Pastor of the Seaman's Church of Our Savior, in New York, where he and his wife did most efficient work as was attested by many letters received by different seamen from all parts of the world who had attended the services when in New York. In 1861 he was called to St. Paul's Church, Flatbush, Long Island. In 1864 he became rector of the Church of the Reconcilation of New York. In March, 1871, he was appointed Principal and Chaplain of Helmuth Ladies College and Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, C. W. On June 12, 1875, he was commissioned by Bishop A. N. Littlejohn as Evangelist of Long Island, which office he held till his death. In 1876 he received a call to St. John's Church, Cornwall, New York, which he accepted, feeling the necessity of assuming less arduous duties than a larger parish demanded. His preaching was convincing, and the church greatly gained in numbers and usefulness during his pastorate. He endeared himself to the whole community by his blameless life, his unswerving allegiance to His Master's cause, and his unfailing courtesy and kindness to all of whatever creed or sect.

His death occurred in Bridgeport, Conn., where he had gone to visit his wife's brother in-law the Rev. Dr. Clarke of Trinity Church, Bridgeport. There he was taken ill with pneumonia and during the two last weeks of his life, spent in almost constant suffering, showed that fortitude and resignation that can only come from the confiding faith of a true child of God. He was enabled by the grace of God to say "it is all in the wise ordering of Providence." Later he said "I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith."

His last Sunday on earth was Easter day and he received Communion from Dr. Clarke and in the early morning of April 1, 1880, he fell peacefully asleep.

Jonathan Huntington, born in Norwich, Conn., November 4, 1719, and married, November 17, 1746, Eunice Lathrop. He was a religious man, and prominent in the organization of the sixth ecclesiastical society of Norwich. He united with the infant church in 1760, and was for years very active in its affairs. The following certificate will show his spirit and position in the church at the time of its date.

"The church of Christ at Chelsey, in Norwich, Conn., in New England, to all the churches of Christ, and whomsoever it may concern, send greeting: Whereas, it has pleased God, in his providence, to call our reverend and worthy pastor, Mr. Nathaniel Whitaker, from us for a season, to go to Europe, to solicit charities for the Indian school, under the care of the Rev. Mr. Eleazer Wheelock, of Lebanon, and to promote Christian knowledge, among the Indians on this continent: We do unanimously recommend him, the said Mr. Whitaker, and his services, to all the churches and people of God, of whatsoever denomination, and wheresoever he may come, as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ, whose praise is in the gospel through the churches, earnestly requesting brotherly kindness and charity may be extended toward him as occasion may require, and that the grand and important cause in which he is engaged, may be forwarded and promoted by all the lovers of truth.

Wishing grace, mercy and truth, may be multiplied to you and the whole Israel of God, and desiring an interest in your prayers, we subscribe,

Yours in the faith and fellowship of the gospel.

JONATHAN HUNTINGTON,
ISAIAH TIFFANY.

By order, and in behalf of said church.

Norwich, October 21, 1766."

He was the chairman of the building committee, for the first church built in the new society, in 1760. He died in Norwich, August 9, 1801; and his wife, in May, 1803, in the seventy-eighth year of her age.

BENJAMIN HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., April 19, 1736, graduated at Yale, in 1761. He married, May 5, 1765, Anne, (1. 2. 4. 4. 7.) of Windham, who died October 6, 1790. He entered, soon after leaving college, upon the practice of law in his native town, and rose rapidly to the front rank of his profession. He seems to have been unusually devoted to his profession, being at once a severe student, and an active and successful advocate and business man. Though rather shunning than courting public life, he was not allowed to excuse himself from its claims; nor, when called to meet them, did he shrink either from public duties or dangers. In 1775 he was appointed, by the legislature of his native State, on the committee of safety, appointed to advise with the Governor of the State during the recess of the legislature. Only the ablest men and truest patriots of that trying day, would have been put upon that important committee. Again, in 1778, on the recommendation of Washington, he was appointed by the legislature, one of the convention to be held in New Haven, for the regulation of the army. From 1780 to '84, and again in '87 and '88, he was a member of the Continental Congress; and when the new government went into operation, in 1789, he was chosen to represent Connecticut in the First Congress of the United States.

From 1781 to 1790, and also from 1791 to '93 he was also a member of the upper house of the Connecticut Legislature. On the incorporation of Norwich city, in 1784, he was chosen, for an indefinite period, its first Mayor, in which office he served until his formal resignation, in 1796. He was also appointed in 1793, a judge of the superior court of Connecticut, holding this office until 1798. Thus, for more than twenty years, during the most eventful period of our history, in which we had claimed and won our independence, and had commenced our most successful career in self-government, was he found continually called to serve his constituents in offices always onerous, and often hazardous. How well he discharged these trusts, their own recurrence will unequivocally evince. A word on this point, however, is due both to his memory and to the truth of our revolutionary history.

For some reason, never explained, he was not in the early stages of preparation for the struggle, prominently identified with its measures. Our explanation is that he was not only a young man, and therefore hesitated to put himself forward: but, also, that he had formed such an ideal for his professional course, that all his strength and time were required in attaining it. The stamp act dates with the year of his marriage, just as he had laid the plans for his professional studies, on which his entire success was to depend. And, with a nice discernment of what was most needed by him, to prepare for the future call which his country would make upon him, no less than to meet the high demands of his profession, he gave himself to an earnest pursuit of legal study and practice.

And, for the time being, he could be spared from the more public discussions and services which the incipiency of our revolution required. His family were well represented in them by older members: Hezekiah, (1. 2. 4. 6.) ripe in years and counsel; Samuel, (1. 3. 4. 2. 4.) already strong and facile for action; Jabez, (1. 3. 3. 4. 1.) with means and a heart for the work, and in the work; and still others of his own family name, scarcely less ready, and restive for the impending struggle, rendered it possible for him, without a breach of faith to the cause, to await a maturer preparation for ampler service to be rendered at a later date. And that future service fully justified his decision. By the May of 1775, he was found ready for an exigency which none but a strong man and a true patriot could meet. He filled acceptably the post to which the patriot legislature of his native State called him; and the fact of that appointment is, itself, no equivocal testimony respecting the position of their agent. They who were called, in that crisis, to take the place of the legislature in advising with their chief executive, during its period of adjournment, were known and tried men. Nor would Washington have recommended him for appointment by the legislature to that convention to be held in New Haven, in 1778, while the war was yet in progress, to arrange for its increased efficiency, unless he had already furnished ample proof, both of an interest not to be bribed, and a courage never to be intimidated.

And that his family were thoroughly patriotic, and ready for any sacrifice for which their country might call, is abundantly attested by this instance of their personal devotion. On an occasion of pressing want on the part of our revolutionary army, an earnest call was made upon the families of Norwich, for supplies of clothing. In the absence of Judge Huntington, then away in the service of the State, his wife, selecting a single blanket, in which to wrap her youngest child, forwarded all the rest to the army; and supplied their place on the beds at home, by blankets cut from the carpets on the floor, preferring, for the present, well sanded floors, without their accustomed covering, that so the noble patriotism of the needy army might be encouraged and rewarded.

Few men and few families of those trying days can show a purer and more patriotic record than he and his. He died in 1800.

HENRY HUNTINGTON, born May 28, 1766, in Norwich, Conn. He graduated at Dartmouth, in 1783, and entered upon the profession of law, but soon abandoned this for commercial pursuits. He established himself in business in New York city, and had also an interest in the partnership of Geo. Huntington & Co., of Rome, N. Y. Becoming largely interested in land speculation, he soon removed to Rome, where he spent the remainder of his life, in a most successful business career. He was chosen President of the Bank of Utica, and retained the post until his resignation, a short time before his death, when his failing health hindered his weekly visits to Utica. His business career, from its beginning to its close, was marked by a high tone of honor and integrity. Avoiding all the petty meannesses to which the ambitious man of business is tempted, he still won all the business ends which the most aspiring could wish. Nor was he without frequent testimonials to the confidence which his fellow-citizens reposed in his political character. In 1805, 1806, and 1807, he was a member of the New York senate; and in 1806, was also a member of the council of appointment. In 1816, and 1818, he was a member of the assembly. In 1821, he was a member of the convention for revising the state constitution. He was also one of the presidential electors, in the elections both of 1808 and 1812. Few men have stood fairer, for honor and integrity; and very few have won higher confidence and esteem for private and social worth. He married Catharine M. Havens. His death occurred at Rome, in October, 1846.

1. CATHERINE, born December 3, 1797, married, March 26, 1833, Col. William Williams, "one of the most benevolent and enterprising citizens of Utica," N. Y., "and one of the most exemplary members and valuable elders in" the First Presbyterian Church of that city. She died in Utica, September 10, 1856. Her funeral sermon, by her pastor, the Rev. P. H. Fowler, contains a well deserved eulogy of her singularly pure and lovely character. From this it appears that in early life she became hopefully a Christian. "Religion took the entire possession of her soul, and became both a master passion and a controlling principle. Especially did it inspire her with its compassionate and benevolent spirit. * * * No one was more enlisted in labors for the heathen, and yet she was quite as much engaged for her own country, and was a model to us all of devotedness to the particular church and congregation to which she belonged. * * * There was a remarkable completeness in the piety of our friend. It was leaven in her heart while it was motion in her life. She was eminently a friend of the poor, a sympathizer with them, a visitor among them, a generous benefactor to them. Yet notwithstanding all she was and the much she did, she was the humblest of Christians, instinctively shrinking from boasting and display. * * * She was one of the rarest, choicest characters in the whole acquaintance of my life. I never knew one in whom it was more difficult to detect a fault. To our partial vision she appeared to bear the perfections of heaven during the probation of earth."

GEORGE HUNTINGTON, born June 5, 1770, in Norwich, Conn. He married, May 21, 1794, Hannah Thomas of Norwich. He was the first of the Huntington family who moved into Central New York. He first settled in Whitestown, in 1792, then the most important of all the New England settlements in that vicinity. He had little or no property, but opened a store as agent for Mr. Hyde of New London. In the succeeding year he removed to Fort Stanwix, near Rome, and by the assistance of his elder brother, Henry, established himself in business. A canal to connect the waters of the Mohawk with Wood Creek was then in contemplation, and was shortly afterwards constructed by the Western Inland Lock Navigation Company, thus forming the earliest connection of the waters flowing to the Hudson with those of the lakes. In this enterprise, the beginning of our system of internal improvements, he took a deep interest, and was, during the existence of the Company, its agent, giving his personal attention to the construction and support of the works. He represented, in part, the county of Oneida, in the Assembly in 1811, '12, '13, '19, '20, '21, and '22. He was a prominent and zealous member of the Congregational church for many years, and a liberal contributor, both of his substance and his energies to every good work.

"The business connection of Henry and George Huntington, under the firm of George Huntington & Co., continued until his death. They gave up the mercantile business about the year 1817, and afterwards dealt largely in real estate, and interested themselves to a considerable extent in the manufacture of iron, cotton, etc. They were noted for their fair and honorable manner of doing business, never allowing themselves to be tempted by doubtful operations, or taking directly or indirectly more than strictly legal rates of interest. I have heard men who recollect occurrences of forty years since, speak of the firmness with which, during a season of great scarcity, 1816, when the crops were cut off and there was great and wide-spread distress for food, this company resisted all temptations to sell to speculators the large amount of grain in their possession, parting with it only in small quantities and at moderate prices, to those who needed it for their own sustenance. Their sagacity, probity and fair dealing, met with deserved success."

This prominent man, "the patriarch of the village," died in Rome, N. Y., September 28, 1842.

CHILDREN.

1. JEDIDIAH VINCENT, born in New York City, January 20, 1815, and married Mary (1.3.3.4.1.1.6.5.) see page 463. He was educated at Yale College, and at the New York University; graduating in 1835. He received his medical diploma at the University of Pennsylvania, in 1838. Finding literature more attractive than his profession, he devoted himself mainly to its pursuit. He labored, also, in the educational field, and accepted an invitation to the professorship of mental philosophy, in St. Paul's College, near Flushing, L. I. In 1841 he was ordained in the Prot. Episcopal church, and after a period assumed parochial duty in Middlebury, Vt. Declining health induced him to visit the South, and to reside for a while in Europe, where he spent four years, returning in 1849. While in Europe he became a Roman Catholic. In 1842 he published a volume of poems, among which were, "The Northern Dawn,', a descriptive piece; a threnodia, "To Emmeline." "The Trysting-place," and translations from the Greek Anthology. Several sonnets completed the volume. The novel, "Lady Alice," appeared in 1849, and was a decided success. Its high artistic merits elicited the applause of critics, and 20,000 copies were promptly sold. Soon followed another novel, "Alban;" a poem, "America Discovered;" "The Forest;" "The Pretty Plate;" "The Blonde and Brunette;" and "Rosemary."

Dr. H., in 1853-4, edited the "Metropolitan Magazine," at Baltimore, and from 1855 to 1857, the "Leader" at St. Louis. He also lectured in several of our large cities, before associations. He returned to France in 1861, and died at Pau, of consumption, March 10, 1862. A beautiful tribute to his memory and personal worth appeared in the "Tablet," a single passage from which is due to his name, in this record:

"With all his rare mental gifts, Dr. Huntington had the meekness and humility of a child, and had, in a most uncommon degree, the art of endearing himself to all with whom he came in contact. In him we saw combined the finished gentleman and the accomplished scholar, the humble, sincere, practical Christian; as a husband, as a brother, as a friend, as a citizen, Dr. Huntington was all that man ought to be, whilst as an author he has left a distinguished name among American writers. His death leaves a void in the ranks of American literature that will be long and severely felt. Dr. Huntington's health failed rapidly after 'Rosemary' was finished; he traveled to the north-west with some benefit, and by the advice of his physician sailed for France in November, 1861, to pass the winter in Pau. In that balmy climate he failed to find permanent relief, but gradually sank, soothed by the tenderest care of wife and friends, and on the 10th of March last went to his rest as calmly as a sleeping infant."

DANIEL HUNTINGTON, born October 14, 1816, in New York City; graduated at Hamilton College, and married, at St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, June 16, 1842, Harriet Sophia Richards. His life was given to the cultivation of the fine arts, for which nature designed him, and in which his success was a triumph. He studied art in 1835, with Samuel F. B. Morse, and became an Associate of the National Academy of Design in 1839, and an Academician in 1840. As a portrait painter he stood at the head of his profession, having a continental reputation. He painted portraits of Abraham Lincoln, Martin Van Buren, Albert Gallatin, Generals Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan, Admiral Dupont, Chancellor Ferris, of New York University, Sir Charles Eastlake, the Earl of Carlisle, James Lenox, William Cullen Bryant, John Sherman, and Bishop A. C. Coxe. The following criticism, found in the "Whig Review," for August, 1846, exhibits his position among our artists at that time.

"Huntington, to whom we are inclined to give the highest place among our artists of the highest school, sent five pictures, exclusive of three portraits, any one of which would have asserted his pre-eminence in this department of his art. Of these, our favorite is the Sacred Lesson, which, although not so full of spirituality, and perhaps not so elevated in tone as his Italy, seems to us a more finished work. The subject, a beautiful girl listening to the story of the crucifixion from an aged man, gave opportunity for all the harmony of contrast, and the embodiment of that high physical and intellectual beauty, of which Huntington seems to have such an admirable conception. His female heads are remarkable for their graceful contour, their high foreheads, but broad, low and classical brows, and for their perfectly feminine expression, which, as well as their freedom from that exaggeration of points of beauty, such as large eyes and small mouths, into which modern painters are apt to fall, gives them a truthful air which some of hotbed taste mistake for materiality. In fact, his women do not look like sylphs, angels, nor goddesses, but like women, which is the grand reason that they are so beautiful. His heads of old men have equal excellence, and are full of character and vigorous drawing. He seems conscious of his abilities in this way, for three of his pictures for this year present the contrast of feminine youth with masculine age. Huntington's pictures bear the stamp of high cultivation and of great genius. Not only are his conceptions beautiful, just, and of a high poetic order, and his designs clear, but his work is almost always well done; the tone of his pictures is such that the eye rests upon them with delight and contentment; the heart sympathizes with the sentiment expressed, and the judgment approves almost without a but.

His effects are always simple, direct, and forcible, for he never descends into the pettiness of his art. His coloring is singularly beautiful, and reminds us of that of Lucca Giordano, fa presto Lucca as he was called, but among American artists it is peculiarly his own. Who has given us such unobtrusive reds and yellows, and such rich, quiet greens? Nobody has ever tried to do it; the very conception of such colors seems to have been left to him, for such was the character of his coloring before he had studied in Italy. They alone are enough to make a reputation, and yet they are but secondary to, though admirably in keeping with, his high poetic conception, his admirable drawing, and exquisite flesh tints. Indeed, so beautiful are these colors in themselves, and so harmonious are the broad masses in which they are introduced, that the eye, after wandering around upon the walls turns unwittingly upon his pictures to drink in their cool, refreshing tone."

The estimate in which Mr. Huntington was held by the members of his own profession, is evinced by his election to the presidency of the National Academy of Design, as their third president, the first two having been Prof. Morse, and A. B. Durand. He held this office from 1862 to 1869, and from 1877 to 1891. He died April 18, 1906. His wife died November 8, 1893.

JAMES HUNTINGTON, born in Norwich, Conn., May 18, 1680. Here he married February 3, 1702–3, Priscilla Miller. He was a man of more than ordinary energy, and was especially prominent in the more important business enterprises of the town in that early day. He was commissioned Ensign in the Norwich Train band in 1721, and was deputy to the General Court in 1727. He was appointed with Lieut. Thomas Tracy, in 1722 "to go down to the Landing Place and lay out what may be needful for the town's use;" and "the next year," as Miss Caulkins correctly reports, "Lieut. Simon Lathrop, Joshua, and James Huntington and Daniel Tracy, all spirited and enterprising men, then in the prime of life, each obtained a conveniency, and began improvements at the Landing Place."

December 5, 1706, he deeded a 50 acre grant of land which was "granted me by the town of Norwich near the southwest corner of the town bounds" to Job Besstow.

He was the only one, in this generation, of that Huntington trio, of whom the same historian of Norwich says, "in the early part of the next (18th) century, there were, perhaps, no more distinguished men in the town." He died, September 3, 1727.

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, born February 1, 1736–7, in Norwich, Conn. He married, December 11, 1763, Anne Pride, who died March 4, 1776. He married for his second wife, February 11, 1777, Lois Durkee; and for his third wife, April 11, 1791, Elizabeth Waterman. He lived in Lebanon, Conn., for a few years, and thence went into Vermont, in which state he died, at Middlebury, July 4, 1816. He was at the battle of Bunker Hill, and was sent to Skeensboro to aid in building Arnold's fleet. He afterwards repaired to the frontier in New Hampshire, where he served as a minute man through the war. It was a great joy to him to recount in his old age the story of his exposures and hardships, and of his encounters with wild beasts and savages in that cold and snowy region.

WILLIAM HUNTINGTON, born February 1, 1816, in Munroe, Co., N. Y.; married, June 23, 1839, in Delaware Co., Ind., Eliza Jane Koontz. She was born October 2, 1823, and died January 12, 1896, at Castle Rock, Wash.

He was a farmer. He lived in Brown Co., Ind., until 1852, during which year he crossed the plains in a prairie schooner, and finally located on a claim of about 500 acres which is now known as Castle Rock, Washington. Here he spent his life. For many years he was the only resident in the vicinity, and all travelers and new comers made his house their home, and were always welcome, whether able or not to pay for their accommodations. In later years, when the N. P. R. R. was completed, and the everlasting tramp made his appearance, Mr. Huntington built a house alongside the track for the free use of the wanderers, and, as his own home was not far from the track, most of them called on him for something to eat, and not one was ever refused.

On a mile post by the R. R. in the vicinity was found the following inscription, "You can always get something to eat of the old man who lives behind the Rock."

Mr. Huntington joined the Christian (Campbellite) Church early in life, and religion with him became a matter of life and conduct. He practiced Christianity in his every-day life, and preached it on Sundays, if no one else was there to preach.

For several years he was the only preacher, and performed that duty to the best of his ability and without compensation. He would not accept a penny for preaching the Gospel, but was always willing to help pay others liberally for doing it.

The city of Castle Rock derived its name from a somewhat eroded rock, over an acre in extent, which rises to the height of 80 to 100 feet, and has the appearance of being castellated.

Castle Rock post-office is undoubtedly the oldest now in existence in Cowlitz county, and among the oldest in the state, having been established, originally, at the residence of William Huntington, its first postmaster, some time during the fifties, when mails were carried by canoe on the river from Monticello to Cowlitz Landing.

After the military road was completed on the west side of the river, in 1861, the office was removed across to the residence of Henry Jackson, and

Mr. Jackson appointed postmaster. But, in 1872, on completion of the N. P. R. R. from Kalama to Olequa, the post-office was re-established at the old location — near the rock from which the place was named. Mr. Huntington, having been again appointed post-master continued to hold the appointment until 1887, when he resigned.

He was United States Marshal of the Territory from 1861 to 1869, was a member of the Territorial Legislature in 1856, and also of the upper branch of the Legislature in 1872. He was elder in the Christian Church for forty-five years. He died April 19, 1894.

HARRY DARBY HUNTINGTON, born September 12, 1811, in Monroe County, N. Y.; married, first, January 26, 1834, Zervia, daughter of David and Ruth (Smith) Klinck. She was born October 5, 1813, in Fayette County, Ind., and died July 25, 1846, in Shelby County, Ind. He married, second, in the Spring of 1847, Rebecca Jane Williams. She was born in Kentucky, and died March 14, 1894, in Monticello, Wash. She had been married before this marriage, to Jeremiah Headley, of Shelby County, Ind.

He was a merchant before emigrating to Washington. He was among the first settlers of what is now the State of Washington, locating in the summer of 1849, a donation land claim of 640 acres, which he afterward increased by purchase to 1500 acres, at the mouth of the Cowlitz River. He was public spirited and hospitable. He never turned a person away hungry or empty handed. On the contrary, many new comers enjoyed his unbounded never failing hospitality, and looked to him for advice and assistance. His sympathy for and generosity toward those in affliction or want was unlimited. For amount and variety of service he rendered to the pioneer settlers, it would be no extravagance to say, he stood head and shoulders above all others.

He built the first wagon road in the county, twelve miles long, through the unbroken wilderness, for the benefit of a new settlement. He was a member of the convention held at his own residence at Monticello, November 25, 1852, which memorialized Congress for the formation of a Territorial Legislature, and was elected again in 1874, to the Legislature practically without opposition. Everybody voted for "Uncle Darb," as he was familiarly and affectionately known.

In connection with Capt. Charles Holman and O. Olson, he established and owned the first line of steamers between Portland, Ore., and Monticello, Wash. Later the line was extended to Astoria, Ore. He was a farmer and stock raiser. He died at Portland, Ore., August 28, 1882.

EDWIN RUTHVEN HUNTINGTON, born September 28, 1839, in Shelby Co., Ind.; married, February 21, 1865, in Monticello, Wash., Antoinette Josephine, daughter of George Washington and Dorothy (True) Baker. She was born December 20, 1839, in Salisbury, Mass. We are indebted to her for much information concerning the descendants of James (1. 3. 10. 2. 4.), see page 945, which she has taken great pains to collect and preserve.

The Castle Rock school district was organized in 1876, with thirteen pupils of school age, and during the first six years school was held in a private house, the residence of E. R. Huntington. Mrs. E. R. Huntington, who is known throughout the county as one that has done more for the welfare, progress and upbuilding of the public school in this county, in the early days when the schools needed encouragement and vigilant attention, than any other person, was the first teacher to preside over the little band of pupils that attended school in this district.

He has seen Castle Rock grow from one house to its present population of 1,200 (1908.) From 1849 he has lived within sight of the Cowlitz river. His father, H. D. Huntington, was one of the first settlers at the mouth of the Cowlitz river. Mr. Huntington conducts the Castle Rock dairy, which is located one mile north of town. He milks twenty-two cows and has a nice farm of 154 acres. Mr. Huntington is a man who has seen many summers

SIMEON HUNTINGTON, born April 2, 1740, in Norwich, Conn. He married, first, January 27, 1777, Freelove Chester, who died June 16, 1787. He married again at Wethersfield, January 15, 1788, Patience Keene, who survived him and died September 11, 1820. He was a blacksmith, and appears to have been an athletic and powerful man. He was in some repute as a military character, even before our Revolutionary war commenced. The Fourth of July, 1774, gave him an occasion to display both his patriotism and his pluck. One, Mr. Francis Green, a Boston tory and an eminent merchant, who for that reason thought he must be loyal, and so save, if possible, his craft, came into Norwich on that day to collect debts. The Norwichers had been notified of the approach of the Tory some hours before his arrival, and the Green before Lathrop's tavern was covered with ardent liberty men, to give him what they deemed appropriate welcome. With few words, as it was now too late for speech making, the assembled patriots unanimously voted Mr. Green the use of fifteen minutes for his departure. He hesitated, his business was urgent, he wanted to collect some monies now due, he was in his king's dominions and should,—but his time for speeches in Norwich was now ended. Capt. Simeon Huntington, with no light hand, gave the gentleman loyalist a sufficiently sensible demonstration of the presence and power, too, of another style of loyalty with which all Norwich men had become thoroughly possessed. Without further resistance, and without calling for his money, Mr. Green "entered his carriage and amid shouts and hissings drove off." Nor did it avail that on his return to Boston, he offered a reward for "any of the ruffians of Norwich, particularly for Capt. Simeon Huntington."

The estimate in which he was held by Gen. Jedidiah, during the war, is attested by one of the General's letters in the American Archives, directed to Gov. Trumbull of Conn., and dated Roxbury Camp, September 9, 1775; in which he expresses his wish that Mr. Simeon Huntington would accept a second lieutenancy then vacant, and assigning as his reason; "I want officers of a military spirit."

This Simeon was one of the Common Council of Norwich City in 1785, as appears from a summons made by Jedidiah, then senior Alderman. He died August 10, 1817.

EBENEZER HUNTINGTON, born in 1782, in New Haven, Conn.; married, as second wife, October 1, 1820, in Alton, Ill., Margaret Tiffin, sister of Gov. Tiffin, of Ohio.

He was an actor in the early years of his life, but gave it up because of the low practices upon which the profession so largely depended. He traveled quite extensively in America, Europe and Asia. After leaving the stage he lectured for some time in the West, and became a sort of pioneer in the new profession which has since been so much honored. He was also an expert surveyor and cabinet maker; this all before he took up farming.

He with an assistant, whose name is now unknown, surveyed Chicago, Ill., some time between the years 1835 and 1845.

In the home of Mrs. Elanora Huntington DeFrees, is a solid cherry table which was made by him. It is conspicuous because of its beautifully carved legs and lack of nails, being put together with old fashioned wooden pegs.

He died on his farm in Alton, Ill., in 1857.

There is nothing positive known of his first wife, but his daughter Margaret, thinks her name was Naomi, and that she and her only child were buried in the same coffin.

MARIA (HUNTINGTON) HULL, born October 3, 1821, in Alton, Ill.; married, February 15, 1842, William Torrie Hull, of Greenbush, N. Y. Shortly after their marriage they moved to Greenville, Ill. Her husband, who was a cavalryman in the Northern army, died soon after the close of the war from an illness contracted in the war. After his death Mrs. Hull turned her energies toward education, and to the day of her death was closely connected with Almira Seminary—then one of the leading schools for girls, and located at Greenville. She died June 24, 1890, at the home of the niece she had raised, Mrs. Elanora Huntington DeFrees.

THOMAS HUNTINGTON, probably the fourth son of Simon and Margaret, though we have no record of the date of his birth. He was not of age in 1650, and was probably born in 1632 or 1633.

He appears to have resided in Windsor, Conn., as he purchased land there in 1656, and in 1658 was employed to mend the boat, and in 1660 was a fence viewer. He next appears on the records of the town of Branford, in 1663. He married, probably, for his first wife, a daughter of Wm. Swain, of Wethersfield, and later of Branford; and for his second wife, Hannah, a daughter of Jasper Crane, merchant, who had moved from New Haven to Branford in 1652, at the settlement of the latter town. It will, perhaps, indicate, not doubtfully, his character that he secured, in that day, an alliance with two such families. The fathers of both of his wives were leading men, both in religious and civil affairs; having been the first deputies to the general Court of Electors from Branford, in May, 1653, and for the next four years; Mr. Swain having been a delegate from Wethersfield, previously to his removal to Branford. That he was not unworthy of the alliance, the record also shows. In 1665, when, to avoid an unpleasant controversy which had arisen between the Branford people and their neighbors, on the union of the New Haven and Connecticut colonies, the Branford people decided to remove beyond the jurisdiction of these two colonies, we find his name among those who subscribed the new compact. In that instrument they bind themselves to provide "with care and diligence for the maintenance of the purity of religion professed in the Congregational churches of Connecticut." The subscribers had been alarmed by the admission into the civil offices of the union, of men not connected with the Christian church.

These new adventurers, having the purity of religion mainly in view, in 1667 located themselves on the banks of the Passaic, in New Jersey, and laid there the foundations of the thriving city of Newark.

Among the pioneers of that new settlement, Thomas was a prominent man. In 1677 he was appointed constable. In 1683 he was one of the townsmen, the first officers in the colony. In 1684 he was one of a committee appointed to treat with the Governor, in regard to a supposed infringement on the rights of the town. In 1685 he was one of the deputies from Newark to the general court of the province of New Jersey.

As Samuel, his son, was made in 1694 a proprietor, which office his father had held, it is probable that Thomas was not then living. The last record of him that appears on the book, is that of 1685; the absence of his name from the list of those who, in 1689, contributed to the support of preaching, is pretty good evidence that between these years he had died.

His widow, Hannah, married John Ward, first of Branford, and afterward of Newark. And there is on record a deed of land, in which this Hannah is named his wife, in 1695.

We do not know of the existence of any representative of this branch of the family, although there may be many. Our information is derived mainly from the record of wills and deeds, and depends largely upon inferences, more or less certain, from these records.

CHILDREN.

*1. SAMUEL, born probably in Branford, Conn.

2. HANNAH. Her grandfather, Jasper Crane, mentions this daughter of Thomas Huntington in his will, calling her his granddaughter. No other record of her has been discovered.

1. 4. 1.

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born probably in Branford, Conn.; married Sarah ———. In 1702, he and his wife, Sarah, conveyed land to Nathaniel Ward. He is described as "son and heir-in law of Thomas Huntington, deceased," in a deed to J. and D. Crane. In 1704, Samuel and Sarah are again recorded as selling land. He was made, in 1694, one of the proprietors of land in Newark, N. J. His will is dated November 11, 1704, and was proved November 19, 1712. By it he gave his eldest son, Thomas, "this end of my homestead with my house and barns, orchards and all other improvements," to his son, Simon, the remainder of the home lot and other land. To his daughter, Hannah, he gave "eighty acres near the Stone house plaine to be disposed of by my executrix, according to the discretion of my overseers;" all other out land to be equally divided between Thomas and Simon. To his wife, Sarah, he gave all his moveable estate, for her use "and for bringing up the three children above named." This seems to imply, that the children were not of age in 1704, and Samuel is not mentioned in the will, which suggests that he was probably born after the date thereof. The widow, Sarah, was appointed sole executrix.

SAMUEL HUNTINGTON, born in Newark, N. J., in 1738, and married Margaret ———. He was a man of public spirit and of manly and generous impulses. His gravestone, standing in the rear of the first Presbyterian church in Newark, says that he died March 6, 1818, aged eighty years. The gravestone of Margaret, his wife, testifies that she died December 23, 1808, aged sixty-eight years.

CHILDREN, BORN IN NEWARK, N. J.

1. PHEBE, married William Lee.
2. SARAH, married Daniel Crane. She had a son, John S. Crane, whom his grandfather Huntington named as one of the executors of his will. He does not appear to have qualified and acted in that capacity. We have not ascertained whether Mrs. Crane had other children.
3. MARY S., married a Sergeant. Her father appointed her as one of his executors, by the name of Mary S. Sergeant, but in her qualifying oath she is called "Mary S. Huntington, late Mary S. Sergeant." Apparently she had in some way resumed her maiden name. Letters of administration on her estate were granted March 3, 1846, and she had probably died a short time before that date.

1. 4. 1. 2.

SIMON HUNTINGTON, born in Newark, N. J., about 1696; married Thankfull ———, and died in 1770.

In 1724. Thomas and Simon Huntington, late of Newark, now of Whipanong, in the county of Hunterdon, "being equally interested in certain lands of our honored father, Samuel Huntington, late of Newark, deceased," convey land to Nathaniel Ward.

In his will, dated March 15, 1770, and proved September 3, 1770, he describes himself as a resident of Morristown, N. J. By it he gave his "Sermon Book Titled the Ten Virgins," to his brother Samuel, and his "Great Bible," to his son Samuel. He appointed his brother, Samuel, and his wife, Thankfull, executors. By this will he gave nothing to his son John, whom he mentions as his eldest son, and who was probably otherwise provided for. John witnessed the will. It is probable that his daughters, who are all named and provided for in the will, were all married. The dates of the births of his children have not been ascertained.

Whipanong is now Whippany. It is said to have been the seat of a tribe of Indians, and has, since the creation of Morris county, been included in it.

3. EUNICE, probably married an Ogden.
4. PHEBE, probably married Joseph or Gershom Gard. Joseph Gard died about 1833, leaving a will in which he mentions his wife, Phebe, his children, Elizabeth, Hesther, Hannah Fairchild and Lewis, and the heirs of his deceased son David. Gershom Gard and Phoebe, his wife, of Morristown, conveyed land to Coonrad Bunn by deed dated July 19, 1784.
5. ELIZABETH, probably married a Pierson. In the records of Morris county there are deeds by three Piersons, each of whom had a wife named Elizabeth, viz: Lemuel, Job and Eleazer C. Pierson. These deeds all bear date between 1789 and 1804.
6. SARAH, probably married a Winters.

1. 4. 1. 2. 1.

JOHN HUNTINGTON, born probably in that part of Hunterdon county, N. J., which is now Morris county. We do not know the dates of his birth and marriage, nor the name of his wife.

He probably had a farm and a forge or furnace for the smelting of iron ore near Shongom (or Shongum) Pond, then in the township of Mendham, now in Randolph, Morris county, N. J. He died between March 15, 1770 and September 16, 1794. The dates of the births of his children have not been ascertained.

CHILDREN.

1. GILBERT. He died in September or October, 1794, leaving a will dated September 16, and proved October 26, in that year, by which he gave to his brother Abraham "my Mountain lott of 24 20-100 acres, my homestead of seven acres and a half and my right to the water fire in Shongom forge;" to his brother Samuel his 26 acre lot at the upper end of the pond and his pond lot; to his sister Mary, his desk and his bees; to his sister Rhoda, his cow; to his youngest brother, John, his wearing apparel and five pounds to be paid to him when he should come of age; to his sisters Mary and Rhoda the use of parts of his house and other privileges while they remained single, and to his sister Libba Nichols, "the Liberty and privilege of my part of the forge to make two tons of Iron, viz: one ton in one year after my decease and one other ton in two years after my decease."

   Samuel and Abraham of Mendham, Morris Co., with their wives, by deed dated May 2, 1797, conveyed to Joseph Meeker, land formerly of John Huntington, deceased, a part of which was "divided" to Gilbert, and by him devised to Abraham, another part which was "divided" to Samuel, and still another which was "divided" to Abraham.
2. SAMUEL, married Abigail ————.

3. LIBBA, married a Nichols.
4. ABRAHAM, married Sarah ———, between June 12, 1795 and May 2, 1797.
5. MARY.
6. RHODA.
7. SIMON, married Keziah ———.
8. JOHN. He conveyed land at Shongum Pond "part of the 113 acre tract," to Jonathan Nichols by deed dated December 16, 1801. This land was probably set off to him in the division of his father's estate. The grantee may have been the husband of his sister Libba. He probably died in 1815.

The interests of the sons of John Huntington in his real estate were in part sold by themselves, and in part by the sheriff of Morris county. They probably removed elsewhere, but where we do not know.

FINIS.

I think it is fitting, in this place to explain the sources of the information contained in our Memoir. As many of you know who have filled out the family history blanks our Historian sent out, most of our information is from some member of the family interested, where there have been discrepancies in dates and so forth, we have taken the record as handed in by the parent or nearest of kin, as the correct one. As to orthography it has been hard in some cases to distinguish clearly which letter was the correct one to use.

Some have spelled the same given name in various ways, in which cases we have adhered strictly to our copy, as also in surnames.

Some dates we have had to change somewhat as they conflicted too much to use as given, when possible we have communicated with those who sent them in. But quite a few forgot to sign their name, or give their residence, and some who did give us this information have forgotten to inform the secretary of their change of residence, consequently the letters which were sent out have been returned as not called for. (I have over five hundred such.)

A great many records have been taken from the Memoir of 1863. Some of our information is taken from town, and probate records, and some from Memoirs of other families, kindly loaned to us, or found in our Historical and State Libraries.

Please keep in close touch with the secretary, giving him all new data, also corrections of errors you may find in this volume, and above all, notify him of change of residence, giving full address, street, number, and town, and may he depend on each one to tell others about this book, and create if possible a demand for a second edition.

I should like to print a list of all who have helped to complete this Memoir. Our thanks are due to our Historian, Mr. Samuel G. Huntington for his very careful and systematic arrangement of data collected, and his untiring efforts to complete his work, which he was compelled to relinquish through disability, I am glad to report that he has greatly improved since this load was lifted from his shoulders. Mr. Samuel Huntington of Plainfield, New Jersey, very generously offered to supervise and correct the work after my compiling, and did much that I did not feel able to do.

The widowed seamstress who took of her hours of rest to give us her husband's Huntington Family tree: Those cousins who have given us three or more generations of Huntington data, which no one else could give us: Those who have given financial support by prepaying their full subscription, in some cases even five years in advance, thus enabling us to meet promptly our first expenses: The printers, and proof readers, and typist. But why go on: All have done what they could.

Personally I have much enjoyed the work in connection with this Memoir, it has brought me into sympathy with your sorrows, and into enjoyment of your pleasures. I thank God that he has given me the opportunity of helping in the preparation of a list of so many noble men and women.

Permit me to digress here, and call your attention to the constitution and by-laws of the Huntington Family Association on pages seven and eight. Let us all cooperate in making the Association a power for good in the land. We have now in 1916 a membership of nearly four hundred, of whom sixty-five are life members. Before our next meeting in 1917 the membership should be doubled, and it should increase far above that figure in years to come. Let me urge the younger members of the Family to join the Association, and to attend its meetings in 1917, and in later years, thus may we achieve results of which we may all be proud.

In these days of biological study, and of the science of eugenics we are learning as never before the value of good inheritance; we as a family are blessed with such an inheritance, but it brings with it grave responsibilities. Let us see to it that we do not shirk them, but are willing to lay all on the altar of Patriotism, as did our forefathers in the Revolution. And may God above have no cause to regret that he has placed us here, and has given us the responsibility of showing the whole earth what true consecrated Patriotism is able to do for humanities' sake.

I would recommend to each of you, the members of the Huntington Family, the warning and the encouragement of the short Epistle of Jude, and I would bid you Godspeed in the closing words of that Apostle.

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy. To the only wise God our Saviour be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever, Amen."

RICHARD THOMAS HUNTINGTON, SECRETARY.

CORRECTIONS
and
ADDITIONS

Digitized by Google

Corrections and Additions to April 1, 1916.

You will notice these are printed on one side of the paper only. If you so desire to, you can cut out the correction or addition, and paste it in the proper place on page called for.

In regard to the full records, by cutting through the margin that part can be pasted on the margin of the page called for, thus leaving the other edge open making it easy to read that record which it covers. On the pages of the index there is not room to insert any other names so paste them at bottom of page and draw a line up to the proper place to insert them.
