

The police are assigned to protect and serve the people / communities not to victimize, assault and abuse civilians or their rights. Most & many times the police are interacting with a criminal, mean, cruel people, might be under the influence of medications / drugs or dealing with mental illness, those people can become extremely difficult even combative or deadly.

It's not only up to the police to have their training re-engineered. It is also up to civilians to be advised, as they interact with law enforcement it is of utmost importance civilians are to be receptive.

I also feel that it's very important that police officers be provided proper psychiatric and therapeutic services. Their experience and what they witness is something that a regular person can't possibly phantom or process for themselves. The police go through things, it is really important that they get the supports and care that they need as much as possible.

And last, we celebrate any changes in police training and accountability, the introduction is not to be viewed as punishment or correction, rather adjusting to changing communities / society. An amicable enhancement. oh and by the way, no military vehicles or weaponry either!!
