

I am a mother of six and a grandmother of 6 (so far). Each of my children and grandchildren has dealt with different health issues. We are a family with lots of allergies, autoimmune disease, celiac disease, fibromyalgia, etc. We have and continue to make decisions regarding our health care, including vaccinations, based on our family history and prior vaccine experience.

I have a grand daughter who is deathly allergic to peanuts, all of the other grandchildre can eat peanuts....should she be forced to eat peanuts because the others do? I have a grandson who cannot digest gluten and becomes very ill....should he be forced to eat gluten? I could go on and on about the differences in our bodies and tolerances. However, the government is trying to force every living being to inject the same slew of chemicals, adjuvants, etc no matter the potential consequences. The problem is we won't know the consequences until they are injected and then it is too late. Vaccines inherently have risks. Vaccines do cause injury and death. Not to all but to those families to whom it happens it is life changing.
WHERE THERE IS RISK, THERE MUST BE CHOICE!

Aside from the fact that vaccines contain ingredients that can cause harm, there are ingredients which pose a religious and/or philosophical problem for some citizens, such as aborted fetal cells. In an era of political correctness and the recognition of the rights of so many diverse groups, why is it that those who have a conscientious/religious objection to vaccines are vilified and may, soon, be excluded from the normal activities of society, most importantly the school system? And are we, as citizens, going to be forced to pay school taxes when our children are forbidden to attend?

I implore you to uphold the rights of each of us to make decisions regarding our and our children's wellbeing.

Sincerely,
Ann Walsh
