Pharmacogenetics and the Personalization of Pain Management: A Potential Role in Precision Opioid Treatment

Jonathan A. Kost, MD, Gualberto Ruaño, MD, PhD

Dear Doctor(s):

On January 1, 1978, the Copyright Revision Act of 1976 became effective. As a result, the Connecticut State Medical Society in consideration of having reviewed and edited your manuscript for publication, now requires each author's signature, evidencing the transferring, signing or otherwise conveying of all copyright ownership, including any and all rights incidental thereto, exclusively to the Connecticut State Medical Society. The Connecticut State Medical Society reserves the right, and you hereby consent, to the publication of your manuscript in Connecticut Medicine as you have submitted it, or to publish an abridged version or a derivative of your manuscript, including but not limited to in an internet-based format to be selected solely by the Connecticut State Medical Society. It is further agreed that permission for reprinting in other publications must be obtained in writing from Connecticut Medicine. Your cooperation in signing and returning this form immediately will help us expedite the publication of your manuscript.
