

Public Health Committee

The data and the evidence are clear: public health attempts at virus mitigation don't work; the unilateral reign of Ned Lamont undoubtedly being the least effective measure.

Our senators and representatives have not discontinued their roles as public servants in other capacities, including holding public hearings via zoom to remove First Amendment granted religious freedoms from vaccinations, usurping the intention of medical informed consent. This goes without saying that if they are capable of meeting as they have and carrying out their responsibilities as they are meant to, Ned Lamont surely should be amenable to releasing his power.

Notwithstanding, requesting of the legislature that they codify 11 Executive Orders into law completely circumvents due process, each of which is rooted in faulty "science" that has proven itself time again over the last 2 years failures. If the failures of vaccines, masks, and other mitigation measures are proving ineffective, even some of the highest courts in our country are ruling in opposition to things like vaccine mandates because "they don't prevent transmission."

We're told to "follow the science" however, the science is telling us these things don't work, yet we are still in pursuit of them. If CT continues to prolong Ned's unilateral power, it proves that itself does not "follow the science" so we have to question what it is actually following?

Lay down in concession and let the powers lapse and if not, it is more than certain your time as public servants will surely do so at midterms.

Lyndsey Maher ND, MSAC
Easton, CT